Have You Seen Foch?
Little and Great FRENCH
Nobel Foolishness
3,000 Cheaper Than 400
By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1921.

A few have seen the wonderful little fighting man from France—Marshal Foch. More than ninety-five million will NOT see him. They might like a few words about him.

He saw Detroit yesterday, met and dined with prominent citizens, Mayor Cousens told him how Father Hennepin sailed into the Detroit River in 1679 and wrote in his diary:

"Those who will one day have the happiness to possess this fertile plain and pleasant strait will be very much obliged to those who have shown the way."

When the Mayor's proclamation was translated to him, Marshal Foch lifted his hands toward the sky, as Frenchmen do, "Grand Dieu, ce pauvre Pere Hennepin, s'il pourrait voir cette ville aujourd'hui."

Marshal Foch was the smallest man in the room, as well as the greatest, not much taller than the tiny Napoleon. And, in spite of his Basque ancestry, he is as French as the Rue de la Paix.

The crowds saw a cap all covered with gold, boots to the knees laced at the front, a long plain overcoat of light blue and then, the face of one of the real men of the world.

It is a tired face, one that after war and its horrible responsibilities now struggles on through peace with responsibilities still greater.

Straight as an arrow, carrying his seventy years, Marshal Foch works as hard and intensely to please crowds of unknown people as though his own life and future depended on making a few new friends.

His face is heavily lined and pale, his hair gray, but not white, and thin. His drooping mustache straggles. He gives it little thought. The tired eyes flash and the chin goes up in the air when the word "France" is heard in some banal speech. There are many such speeches.

When a very beautiful lady of Detroit, with a gigantic bunch of flowers, made him a long speech, Foch held her hand in his throughout the entire speech, mumbling French compliments that would have done her heart good if she could have understood him.

He is military and precise, not knowing exactly what is expected of him, willing to do anything, praise anything, his hand held in firm salute, bowing right and left, he faces one crowd after another. Many men in one have been packed away in that skull during the thousands of years, a mixture of Gaul, Frank, Roman, Basque, Iberian, Celt, and heaven knows what, all combined to make up the conqueror Foch of today.

The real beauty of that magnificent old face you see all in one moment when little children crowded around his feet on the steps of Detroit's City Hall to be photographed with him. The old marshal bent over, patted each child on the head, forgetting his erect carriage and his military salute. Fate has made him a conqueror and a killer of many men, nature made him a lover of children.

The Nobel Commission, which gives as prizes to scientists and writers part of the fortune accumulated by the man that invented dynamite, bars H. G. Wells, Bernard Shaw and Maxim Gorky from any part of the prize "because their writings are influenced by political considerations." There is at least one fool on the Nobel Commission. Every complete man interests himself in public questions and in politics.

Had it not been for the political fights and hatreds of Italian cities, Dante would never have written "The Divine Comedy." Without political hatreds and jealousies among the Greeks Homer would have written neither Iliad nor Odyssey.

To ship a ton of white newsprint paper from Niagara Falls to New York city costs more than to ship a ton from Germany to New York city.

From Niagara to New York runs the Erie Canal, with Niagara's power at the far end to send the power over wires. The ocean ship must carry its own coal.

American business men asking for protection, which they ought to have in reason, should think a little about protecting themselves against their own expensive and extravagant methods. There is something feeble in a system that cannot carry a ton of white paper 400 miles on a smooth barge canal as cheaply as foreigners can carry it across the ocean.

More from the Yomiuri, Japanese newspaper, which says: "We had supposed Great Britain would remain neutral in case war broke out between the United States and Japan, but now Lord Northcliffe says Great Britain and the dominions would stay themselves with the United States."

England probably would not ally herself with the United States at first—the United States wouldn't need it. But if the impossible did happen, and Japan conquered this country, it would be a sad day for England and her dominions. This world would be a yellow world and all would sink back into barbarism. Bad for Japan also.

Japan and the Yomiuri ought to recognize conditions as they are. Let them do as they please in

Premier May Quit in Irish Crisis

NOW WAITS ULSTER'S ANSWER

Compromise Proposal to Be Presented to Craig Tomorrow

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 8.—The possibility that Premier Lloyd George and his Cabinet may resign on Friday as a result of the Irish peace crisis was being discussed in the inner circles of Downing street today.

The Premier will confer tomorrow with Sir James Craig and other members of the Unionist Cabinet of Ulster and the future course of the British Cabinet in the Irish peace negotiations will depend on this meeting.

If the Ulstermen reject the Premier's proposals for a compromise and refuse to have any dealings with the Sinn Fein, then it is likely that Premier Lloyd George will seriously consider resignation and a general election with Irish peace as the chief issue.

FEAR "BETRAYAL"

In his recent speech in the House of Commons just before receiving a vote of confidence, the Premier intimated that he might resign if the Unionists succeeded in wrecking the Irish Peace Conference. The Premier's colleagues declared today, however, that he would not resign unless every other resource failed. Or it is the ambition of the Premier's life to leave Irish peace as a legacy to his country when he retires from the government.

The Ulstermen do not attempt to conceal their belief that Lloyd George may "betray" them to the Sinn Feiners.

Their opposition has stiffened within the past few days and the breach between North Ireland Unionists and the British Cabinet has widened despite the efforts of A. Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson to bridge it.

At the same time there is a possibility that a split may occur among the Ulstermen. The British Premier is a powerful pleader with great powers of persuasion and if he can win the support of the Ulster business men with economic arguments they may bring pressure upon the "irreconcilables."

The Orange lodges in Ulster are the backbone of the opposition to a compromise. They threaten to bring about Sir James Craig's political downfall if he yields to South Ireland.

Intimates of Premier Lloyd George say that he has made it plain to his

TODAY COLDEST NOV. 8 ON RECORD

25 Degrees at 5 O'Clock Also Sets Lowest Mark So Far This Season

With the mercury dropping to 25 degrees above zero at 5 o'clock this morning a new record for low temperature on November 8 was set in Boston, according to the local weather bureau, which announced that today is the coldest November 8 on record.

Today is also the coldest day of the present season. Cold weather prevails throughout the entire northern section of the country, according to the weather bureau. For the first time this season the mercury has dropped below zero in the Northern sections, reaching 10 below in Ontario. At Northfield, Vt., a temperature of 10 degrees above zero was reported.

OFFERS HIS PLANT TO UNIONS

Lynn Shoe Workers Plan to Accept Terms and Run $150,000 Shop Two Years

B. F. Green, treasurer of the Lynch Shoe Company of Lynn, stands ready today to turn over his plant, valued at $150,000, to the Heel Workers' Union of Lynn for a period of two years, provided the union will furnish a bond that at the end of that time they will return the plant in as good condition as it is now.

Mr. Green in making the offer declares he wishes to prove to the shoe workers it is impossible to get and do business under existing conditions.

"If it can," he adds, "I want to be shown and I am willing to pay the price of being shown."

His offer was taken up by the officials of the Heel Workers' Union, although at first there was considerable inclination among the union men to regard the offer as "a cheap form of advertising."

UNION MEN CONFIDENT.

After deliberation by the officers, it was determined to send the business agent to the members of the organization, one of the richest of the shoe workers' unions in Lynn, in an effort to ascertain just how the rank and file of the union stands toward the project.

"We are perfectly satisfied, knowing what we do of the shoe business," said one of the union officials today, "that the factory can be worked steadily and to advantage, even under existing conditions.

"There has been an enormous amount of 'bunk' about the difficulties confronting the shoe manufacturers. They are having troubles, of course, but not so many as they would have the general public believe.

"We are willing, if the majority of the union approves, to take a whirl at running this factory, and there is no doubt that we can get the bond required."

STATEMENT BY GREEN.

In his statement, Mr. Green said:

"We have a factory and equipment here worth $150,000. If any of these Lynn shoe workers who believe that we should be doing business under existing business conditions will give us a bond that they will return the plant in as good trim as they took it over, they can have the whole establishment for two years free of charge.

"Business under existing conditions simply cannot be done. If it can, I want to be shown and I am willing to pay the price for being shown."

CHARGES PLANT TO McISAAC DENIED BY

Files Answer With Supreme Court Asking That Petition Be Dismissed

Attorney Daniel V. McIsaac, one of the four Boston attorneys for whose disbarment the Bar Association has petitioned the Supreme Court, today filed a general denial of all the allegations made against him.

This is the first of the answers filed to the Bar Association's charges by any of the accused four.

McIsaac in his answer, filed shortly after noon by John J. McAnarney, counsel for McIsaac, denies he has been guilty of any unprofessional conduct, or of deceit or malpractice as alleged by the Bar Association in its complaint. He asks that the petition for his disbarment be dismissed.

DENIES CONSPIRACY.

In relation to charges that he conspired with Daniel H. Coakley to obtain a large sum of money from the estate of John Sullivan of Brookline, McIsaac says:

"For answer to the matters and things set forth and alleged in paragraph No. 1 of the petition, your respondent denies that he conspired with one Daniel H. Coakley of the Boston bar to obtain a large sum of money from the estate of John Sullivan, late of Brookline, and that pursuant thereto he induced Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, mother and next of kin of the said John Sullivan, to employ him as her attorney to contest the will of the said John Sullivan and to enter into an agreement to pay him altogether excessive and unreasonable fees in the matter.

"He further denies that he received from the said Coakley a very large sum of money from the estate of the said John Sullivan, and denies that he retained an excessive and disproportionate part thereof for his own use. He denies that he misled his

STRANGER'S VISIT TO MORGUE PROBED

Views Victim's Body and Disappears After Phoning False Clews to Police

A wealthy Greater Boston man was sought today in connection with the effort of the police to discover the real identity of "Barbara Grayson of Worcester," the attractive and richly dressed young woman who killed herself in a lodging house at No. 658 Massachusetts avenue.

Coincident with this discovery police admitted that they were investigating the visit of a man about thirty-five years old to the morgue where the girls body lay shortly after noon today.

The man refused to give his name, acted in a peculiar manner, and later telephoned from a nearby station that he knew the suicide victim.

He qualified this by explaining that she might be "either one of two young Worcester women."

The first, he said, was Florence Haggerty, a Worcester girl, who was despondent because of an unhappy love affair.

FALSE CLEWS.

The second he described as "a cashier in the R & D lunchroom at Main and Front streets, Worcester."

All this explanation became even more mysterious when police inquiries to Worcester disclosed that there was no Florence Haggerty there; that there was no R. & D. lunchroom at Main and Front streets, and that there was no young woman missing from that city who answers the description of the suicide victim.

Attendants at the city Hospital morgue, where "Barbara Grayson's" body lies awaiting identification, described the man of mystery as about thirty-five years old, dark com-

POLICE BAFFLED IN EFFORT TO TRACE IDENTITY OF GIRL SUICIDE

CLOTHING YIELDS NO CLEWS

plexioned, well dressed, prosperous in appearance, brown hair and about 5 feet 6 inches in height.

While at the morgue he disclaimed knowing the girl suicide at all. It was not until he got on the telephone that he admitted rshi she might be "either of two Worcester girls."

ABANDON WORCESTER SEARCH.

Police at work on the case today had frankly abandoned the theory that the suicide was "Barbara Grayson" or that she came from Worcester. It is believed that she is a Greater Boston girl; that her name was assumed; that she had been in Worcester and heard of Bloomingdale road, or avenue; and that she went to the Massachusetts avenue lodging house with the express purpose of killing herself and ending whatever sorrow was afflicting her.

The police are trying to identify the girl by her clothing, which has been sent to various department stores, and also by dental work in her mouth, descriptions of which have been sent to dentists.

The girl's teeth ar described as follows: Left, well preserved gold crown on left side of lower bi-cuspid; gold crown on two molars; gold crown on upper molar, and a flying bridge on the right side, gold crown on lower bi-cuspid, amalgam filling on first upper clar and small filling on lower gum margin.

The girl came to the house, which is conducted by Mrs. Josephine Campfield, last Saturday, and secured a room. She gave her name, Miss Barbara Grayson, with the address, No. 209 Bloomingdale road, Worcester. In response to friendly questionings from other roomers at the place, she said she had come to Boston to take a position as stenographer in a downtown department store.

Then, two short days after her arrival at the house, she took her life and left to the mistress of the rooming house, to her chance acquaintances and to the people one of the most puzzling mysteries that has come to the surface in years.

Going almost into her room, the girl cut her blankets into slits, cramming them into the chinks of door and windows. Her little handkerchief, daintily embroidered with fine forget-me-nots, was jammed into the keyhole of the door. With every air space closed, she partially disrobed, turned on a gas jet and threw herself across the bed.

DEAD ON BED.

A few hours later Miss Campfield went upstairs to her room to speak to her. Approaching the door, she smelled the pungent, acrid fumes of escaping gas. Thoroughly alarmed, she summoned a sister, and together the two broke down the door.

The room was full of gas, overpowering in its poisonous strength. The women dashed in to turn off the jet and fling the windows wide open. Then they turned to the bed.

Clothed in lingerie of an exquisite richness, a weary, mocking smile tinging her lips, pretty "Barbara Grayson" was stretched in the still- ness of death. Medical aid was called promptly, but too late.

Authorities in Worcester were at once notified to communicate with the girl's parents or relatives. Then it was discovered that the address she gave was fictitious, and that she has never, so far as could be ascertained, been heard of in that city. Neither relatives nor friends could be found.

Detectives covered Boston and the suburbs in an effort to find some trace of the girl's origin, but in vain. In her room were no letters, no papers of any kind that might throw light on the search. Her handbag contained $1.25 in change and a small safety razor. No laundry marks of any sort were to be found on her clothing.

The body was taken to the City Morgue. All the rest of the day, and all through the night, it lay there alone. No one came to identify her or to view the body.

client as to his fees or as to any other matter.

"He denies that he declined to permit her to have the advice of relatives and duties that he declined to modify agreement, as set forth in petition, denies that he was informed that she misunderstood its effect, and further denies that he failed in his said client in any improper manner.

MOTHER NOT MENTIONED.

"For further answer to the matters and things set forth in paragraph No. 1 of said petition, your respondent says that in August, 1910, he was employed by the said Margaret Sullivan, mother and next of kin of John Sullivan, late of Medford, and Cora, leaving property estimated to be worth $500,000, that said John Sullivan died without leaving issue and said widow to whom he willed his entire estate.

"His mother, who was his only next of kin, was not mentioned in any way in his will, and was left apparently without funds for her care, support and maintenance. The said Margaret Sullivan, before employing the respondent as her attorney, had made several efforts to compromise the will of her son with the widow, without success, and it was on the recommendation of her relatives that she retained the respondent to contest the allowance of said will.

"From August, 1916, until the hearing before the Norfolk County Probate Court, your respondent devoted a large part of his time and energy in preparing to contest said will and in securing evidences of undue influence exercised by one Mary Sullivan, widow of the said John Sullivan, to induce him, the said John Sullivan to will all of his property to her and to thereby cut off from any participation in the same his aged mother and next of kin.

MATTER COMPROMISED.

"That your respondent was successful in obtaining evidence which in his opinion would justify a jury in setting aside said will, and this evidence, when produced at a hearing in the Probate Court, was of sufficient weight and character that the Judge of said Court forthwith issued a certificate which stated in substance that upon his consideration of the matters relied upon by the contestant, Mrs. Margaret Sullivan, he, the Judge, deemed it a proper subject for a judicial inquiry before a jury.

"That thereafter negotiations were entered into with the executors of said will by their attorney for a compromise of the same, and these negotiations continued on until January, 1918, when a compromise was effected whereby substantially one-fourth of the estate of the said John Sullivan was turned over to your respondent's client; to wit: $116,000.

"That answering your respondent denies that he ever entered into a conspiracy with any one to obtain money from the estate of the said John Sullivan, but on the contrary did what any reputable attorney would have done under similar circumstances.

"Your respondent further denies that he induced his client to enter into any agreement to pay him excessive and unreasonable fees in the matter, and avers that his charge for services was reasonable and proper.

OSBORN CASE.

"In conclusion, your respondent says that all his relations and dealings with his client were open and and entirely satisfactory to her, and that there was no dissatisfaction or any kind expressed concerning either his conduct of the case or his charge for services therein."

Concerning the Joseph E. Osborn alienation case McIsaac says:

"Your respondent denies each and every allegation in Paragraph No. 2 in the petition as fully entirely and specifically as if each allegation was herein separately denied and in detail.

"And further answering your respondent says that on or about February 11, 1918, he was engaged by one John B. Hart to represent him in divorce proceedings which had been instituted against him by his wife, Ida I. Hart, wherein she alleged he had been guilty of cruel and abusive treatment toward her; that pursuant to instructions received from said Hart at various times during the months of July, the early part of 1918 he employed detectives to gather such information as they could regarding the conduct of said Ida I. Hart; that the information so received from these detectives he submitted to and considered with said Hart; that in 1918 Ralph Stearns, Esq., counsel for said Ida I. Hart in said divorce proceedings, conferred with your respondent concerning a claim made by said John B. Hart that one Joseph E. Osborn of Peabody, Massachusetts, had alienated the affections of his said wife; that after said conference further evidence was obtained in support of said claim, and thereafter in the latter part of January or the early part of February, 1919, William J. Corcoran, Esq., representing himself as counsel for said Osborn, interviewed your respondent concerning said claim, and as a result of negotiations had with said Corcoran, as to all of which said John B. Hirt was kept informed, and with the approval of said Hart, and in consequence of instructions received from said Hart, your respondent received the sum of $12,689 for him as his attorney, in settlement of his claim against said Osborn; that after the payment of expenses incurred and his fees for services, there was paid to his client $10,000, which was accepted by him in full settlement; that he never was advised or informed by said Hart concerning a settlement of said claim or for his services; that when said claim was settled and $12,689 accepted in adjustment thereof, your respondent in good faith believed that was all that said Osborn would pay in settlement of said claim, and that he had made a proper and reasonable settlement to make; and that he fully and frankly informed his client as to all information he had upon that subject; that there were no misrepresentations made by him to his said client, either as to the amount of money said Osborn had paid or was about to pay to said William J. Corcoran, as he had no knowledge thereof.

"Your respondent further answering and alleging in said second paragraph says that he fully advised said Hart, John B. Hart, in all his legal rights in relation to said divorce proceedings; that said Hart was fully advised as to his legal rights in the promises after said settlement had been effected of his claim against said Osborn, directed your respondent to withdraw his appearance in said divorce proceedings; that your respondent acted accordingly and ceased to act as attorney for said Hart in connection with said claim and said divorce proceedings he acted in good faith and in accordance with instructions received from his said client, John B. Hart.

FULL AND DUE FIDELITY.

"Your respondent further answering, denies that he in any way violated his duty to his said client, John E. Hart, or misled him by any advice with respect to his rights in connection with said divorce proceedings, or in any ay failed to protect his rights in the premises, but on the contrary fully carried out the premises he acted with full and due fidelity to his said client, John E. Hart.

"Your respondent further answering, said complaint denies that as to the matter set forth in paragraph No. 3 of said petition hes was guilty of either deceit, malpractice or gross misconduct.

"Therefore he prays this Honorable Court that said petition may be dismissed.

"DANIEL V. McISAAC."

TWO YEARS FOR SPRINGFIELD BIGAMIST

East Boston "Bride" Happy as Cay Lothario Is Sent to Prison

Springfield, Nov. 8.—Margaret R. Murphy of East Boston, the spirited young woman who was humiliated some months ago to find that instead of being "the only one," she was only one of three wives of dapper Clyde L. Fox, stock salesman, had her revenge today when Fox pleaded guilty to bigamy in District Court and was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction.

The fickle-minded Lothario was dressed as neatly as ever, but had lost much of his gay "I don't care" attitude.

Fox was arrested in Ramsey, N. J., some weeks ago charged with larceny, but these charges were suppressed, the bigamy complaint being made by Miss Murphy.

He had married Miss Murphy, whose home is at No. 25 Neptune road, East Boston, in March of this year. They were married by a Boston priest, and the "bride" believed she was his first matrimonial experience. But he had married Nellie G. Hartley of Hollidaysburg, Pa., a student at Penn State University, back in 1916.

As if these two ventures were not enough for his adventurous spirit, Fox married Angelina H. Gath of this city last September, six months after he united with Miss Murphy. He and Miss Gath ran away to Bridgeport, Ct., for the ceremony.

One unusual feature of the prosecution of Fox was that Miss Murphy, wife No. 2, visited him in his cell daily. Also, he made friends with Miss Gath, wife No. 3, and stayed with Miss Gath when she visited this city to identify Fox as the husband in whom she had a third interest.

ORDERS HEARING ON BARROOM INJUNCTION

Judge Sisk in the Equity session of the Superior Court today ordered immediate hearing of the application filed this week ago by Francis M. Kelly, who keeps a saloon at No. 8 Cambridge street, West End, for an injunction restraining Superintendent of Police Crowley and Police Captain Richard Fitzgerald of the 5th street station from interfering with his business.

At the time of filing the application the attorneys for both the saloon keeper and the police reached an agreement under which the police agreed to discontinue guards at the saloon door and inside the place.

Today Major Thomas L. Walsh appeared before Judge Sisk in behalf of Kelly and stated that the stipulation is being violated. He produced photographs showing police officers standing on a box and looking into the saloon window, while other officers were standing on the sidewalk nearby.

Attorneys for the police officials entered a general denial of any knowledge on the part of their clients of such action by the officers and declared that if the guards are still on at the saloon that they were there of their own accord and without instructions from their superiors.

Judge Sisk, however, ordered that the bill be heard at once.

Counsel for Kelly announced that the saloonkeeper intends to bring suit for damages he alleges has been sustained by his business.

British Leaders in London Conference

London, Nov. 8. (By Associated Press.)—An important meeting for consideration of phases of the Irish question was held in Downing street this morning, the participants being the majority of the government's negotiators, including Prime Minister Lloyd George, Winston Churchill, Austen Chamberlain, Lord Birkenhead and Sir Gordon Hewart.

It is believed the meeting mainly concerned itself with the legal steps necessary to fulfill the government's pledge to Ulster that the Ulster Parliament would be enabled to function properly and be provided with funds.

Action along these lines, it is pointed out, does not seriously affect the general negotiations for an Irish settlement, for under the government's plan Ulster would be left a local parliament with more power than the present parliament has.

Desmond Fitzgerald of the Sinn Fein delegation, said this morning on behalf of himself and his colleagues, that they were taking no part in the talks now in progress between Sir James Craig, the Ulster Premier, and Mr. Lloyd George, and were merely waiting until the British Prime Minister could put to them a practical proposition recognizing the unity of Ireland.

CRAWFORD IS RESTRAINED IN LOVE SUIT

Must Not Dispose of Property, on Petition of E. J. Paul

One of the strangest matrimonial mixups ever presented to the public, that involves the families of Fred L. Crawford, Newton garage man, and Edward J. Paul, Watertown park commissioner, took a new turn today when Paul secured an injunction restraining Crawford from disposing of his stock in the Crawford Garage and Taxi Service Company, Newton.

Paul is suing Crawford for $25,000 alleging alienation of the affections of Mrs. Paul and asserting that the garage man would assign his property to his son, Donald, and so render a judgment void.

Judge Sanderson in the equity motion session of the Superior Court granted the injunction and took under advisement Paul's petition for a further injunction restraining the son from accepting the property and the other directors of the company from giving Crawford any money from the concern, either in salary or dividends.

Crawford, who is president of the Crawford Garage and Taxi Service Company, filed suit for divorce from his wife on the grounds of alleging cruel and abusive treatment and a failure on the part of his wife to provide a happy home for her wife.

Almost simultaneously Mrs. Grace H. Paul, vice-president of the Watertown Women's Club, filed suit for divorce from Paul, likewise charging him with cruel treatment.

While society people in Watertown and Newton were wondering what the outcome of the suits, Paul brought his allenation suit against Crawford, charging that he would be able to produce plenty of evidence of friendliness between his wife and his former friend, the garage man.

The Crawfords and Pauls were friends for years, according to mutual acquaintances, and this friendship was not severed until Paul became jealous of the Newton garage proprietor.

Prior to the the break both families summered at South Yarmouth, belonging to the same section of the same social set.

While Mr. and Mrs. Crawford are living apart she is continuing to act as his partner and office manager in the garage and undertaking business. She has stock in his concern.

Mrs. Crawford has told interviewers that she considers her business apart from sentiment and has added that she thinks her husband's charge of cruelty is ridiculous

Concerning the rumor that Crawford expects to marry Mrs. Paul after both got their divorces, she replied, "All I can say is that if it is true, I wish them the best of luck."

BANDITS FORCE ENGINEER TO HELP THEM IN TRAIN ROBBERY

TOURISTS TAKE PART IN BATTLE

By Associated Press.

Champaign, Ills., Nov. 8.—J. F. Fogerty, engineer of the train held up near Paxton last night, and the only member of the train crew who took part in teh affray and escaped uninjured, described the holdup and his experiences today.

"The first intimation I had of the robbery came shortly after we left Paxton," he said. "I heard a grunt, turned around and a masked man clambered down beside me, thrusting a revolver against my rib. Another had the fireman covered.

"'Step 'em up,' he shouted.

"Before I could reply he had me step down and run on over to the bridge across the Vermilion River.

"'How many mail coaches are ther?' he asked.

USED HIM AS SHIELD.

"I told him there were four and made me take them down. He had a bunch of men waiting at the river and had me flash the headlight twice to let them know all was set. They ordered me to climb down and go back to the mail car.

"The mail clerks ordered us to halt. They were armed. One bandit, his revolver still sticking in my ribs, pushed a flashlight into my hands.

"'Show them who you are,' he commanded.

"The flashlight felt like fire in my hands as I pushed the button. 'Don't shoot, I'm the engineer,' I cried.

"The mail clerks slammed the door shut. The bandits waited a short time, then placed a stick of dynamite under the mail car. It wasn't strong enough to wreck the car, but another blast opened the door.

"A moment late none of the mail clerks was lying to one side with a cash in his hand and the other was standing with his arms high in the air alongside the car. Two of the men blew the safe. The firemen and I were forced to lie flat on the bottom of the car while the bandits worked.

"By this time the passengers were going in our direction. From the cars in front, armed guards poured a stream of bullets toward the mail car. Flames from gasoline or waste ignited by the explosion, began to light up the interior of the car. They made us throw out the pouches.

ENDANGERED BY BULLETS.

"I looked at Banks, the fireman, who was lying a short distance from me. He signalled to jump and we both ran for the engine. He was shot as we ran but I was untouched. I crawled beneath the pilot of the engine. Banks and another man was with me.

"Under there we were partly protected from the bandits but the stray bullets fired by passengers partly endangered us. As the light from the burning car grounded, the bandits either accidentally frightened or satisfied with what they had found, slowly backed to the end of the bridge and leaped into the darkness. Then I heard an automobile start and they were gone."

GALLI-CURCI TO START SEASON IN NEW YORK

Returns to Scene of Her Many Triumphs After Stay in the Catskills

New York, Nov. 8.—Women should wear knickerbockers if they can do so with good effect—that is, if the knickerbockers are becoming, otherwise they should stick to skirts, the longer the better.

This is the opinion of the famous diva, Mme. Galli-Curci, just back in the city from the Catskills, where she has been overseeing the construction of a new home at High Mountain, near the famous Gould estate.

She announced that she would open with the Metropolitan Opera here in a number of operas, and then go to the Chicago Opera Company, where she will open in "Madame Butterfly."

"Personally," she said, speaking of dress, "I prefer the styles of two years ago. The short skirts are so convulsed. But if women want to wear knickerbockers on the street, I have no objection, provided the 'knickers' are becoming."

"BLUEBEARD" IS BESIEGED WITH PROPOSALS

Scores of Women Anxious to Marry Frenchman on Trial for Eleven Murders

By International News Service.

Versailles, Nov. 8.—Handsome and alert, Henri Desire Landru, so-called "modern Bluebeard," who is on trial charged with the murder of ten women and a boy, faced direct examination by Presiding Judge Gilbert today.

The prospect of a battle of wits between Landru and the Court brought to the court even a larger crowd than attended on opening day. Practically all were women. A number of fashionably dressed women came from Paris by motor car.

Landru, unperturbed, smiled at the prettiest women in the spectators' gallery and made a little bow as he sat down beside his counsel.

"I never harmed a woman in my life," declared the prisoner. "I never even struck a woman."

"But where are these women who have disappeared?" he was asked.

"I am pledged to secrecy," replied Landru. "Honor forbids me to speak."

Landru had taken special pains with his toilet in order to make the best possible impression on the large number of women spectators.

Although charged with having killed ten women and swindled nearly $300, altogether, it was revealed that he had received scores of marriage proposals since his arrest.

NEW TANGLE IN SETTLEMENT OF AMES WILL

Executors to Ask Court for Instructions on Income for Widow

Taunton, Nov. 8.—Another tangle in the financial affairs of Mrs. Fannie Holt Ames, widow of the Boston and Easton multi-millionaire, William Hadwyn Ames, is scheduled to come before the Taunton probate court within a few days.

The executors of the Ames estate, who are also trustees for the life estate fund for the young widow, have decided to ask the court for instruction on disposition of the income from certain real estate, originally the property of the late Oliver Ames, father of William, and at one time Governor of the State.

Under the Oliver Ames will, construction on portions of which is involved in the latest legal move in the celebrated case, certain of the real estate were devised to the son, William Hadwyn Ames, for life, with the right of disposition by will.

Under the terms of the William Hadwyn Ames will, the widow inherits "all of my real estate absolutely."

But the executors are in doubt, the petition they have filed with the probate court declares, whether the proceeds from the parcels over which William Hadwyn had power of disposition should go to the widow under that clause or should be made part of the trust fund from which the widow is to receive the income during her lifetime or while she remains unmarried.

The petition is returnable November 15.

William Hadwyn Ames left an estate, including the life interest in his father's property and which he had the right of disposition by will, of approximately $1,000,000. In proceedings tried a year ago, in which relatives of William Hadwyn Ames claimed that the young widow was entitled only to income from her husband's individual estate, the widow won. Her income from the estate is said by the trustees to be between $110,000 and $120,000 annually.

Farrar Marriage Wrecked by Too Much Oxygen, Says Boston Doctor

Songbird Should Have 'Wed Nitrogen Man to Secure Her Life of Ideal Happiness.'

By HAZEL CANNING

Geraldine Farrar is the Oxygen Woman.

Lou Tellegen is the Oxygen Man.

Therein lies the reason why the marriage of these two celebrities was not the success it might have been. The opinion is given by Dr. R. Kendrick Smith, prominent Boston physician and keen looker on at life's varying, human side show.

Dr. Smith says: "The oxygen man should marry the nitrogen woman; or the nitrogen man should marry the oxygen woman.

"But when the two oxygens, male and female, or the two nitrogens, masculine and feminine, come together in marriage—matrimonial shipwreck is bound to result."

RULE FOR MATRIMONY

Here, gentle reader, is the whole law and prophets, the alpha and the omega, of the science of matrimony—beware your chemical counter part when choosing your dear John or Mehlabel to be your companion through life. Instead, when a-marrying you would go, take unto yourself, you're chemical opposite. Dr. Smith was prompted to this advice by an ultimatum delivered by Dr. Elisabeth Young of Chicago.

"Girls," said Dr. Young, "shun as you would the smallpox, the oxygen man. The oxygen man is enthusiastic over something new every day in the week. This enthusiasm is apt to take the form of the strange woman."

In other words, according to the doctor, the oxygen man is a bold, bad flirt. Now Dr. Smith does not at all agree with the Chicago colleague.

"With all due respect to the ladies," says Dr. Smith, "I must say that Dr. Young is only partially scientific. To be sure, the oxygen man has many enthusiasms. But, if he is full of oxygen, he is also full of other valuable things.

"For my part I should prefer the red-faced man, full of energy, because of what oxygen brings with it. The oxygen man may talk more than other men, as Dr. Young says, but he also does more of things useful than the ordinary man, because, he is more full of life. The process of oxydisation is the life process.

"People with oxygen are the doers, the great creative artists, the men and the women aggressive to love and life. In the arts and professions. Two persons of this oxygen-chemical equipment, therefore, are hardly suited to each other matrimonially.

"Therefore Lou Tellegen was not the fitting husband for Geraldine Farrar, because they each were of the oxygen makeup. Their each did things—they are both actors—they ran along the same channels; they were both strong, able animated people, unyielding.

"Therefore Miss Farrar should, for happiness, have chosen a nitrogen mate—and Lou Tellegen should have done likewise.

NITROGEN WOMAN.

"For the person in whom nitrogen is the dominating chemical is of an easier, more comfortable, pliant, yielding nature. Sometimes the nitrogen person is comfortable, even lazy. Nitrogen wives make excellent consorts to oxygen husbands.

"They are the women who keep a warm hearth and a warm heart and soft arms extended in welcome for their oxygen husbands. Of the nitrogen chemicals, one, sodium, is the most important.

"Now Dr. Young of Chicago has a perverse sense of the chemistry of the body. It seems to me, she evidently doomes a man or a woman from the chemical compounds. Now, as a matter of fact, a man or woman may regulate the bodily chemicals to make life wonderful and full. For instance, Dr. Young states that the sodium woman—that is the woman in whose chemical compounds run too much salt—is the woman who is likely to run off with the man of her husband.

"The tasteless, she says, and will go, regardless of the rules, after the man who can give her the best motor car and the finest feathers. This is a bit far fetched.

"The sodium woman is more often the sickly woman, particularly if she is excessively sodium. A good rule for her, as for any woman over thirty or forty is—banish the salt cellar from the table.

"There is salt in abundance in the air for the sodium woman. Let her breathe deeply, and in this way increase her vitality.

"The persons with too much oxygen, nitrogen, chalk or any of the chemicals may regulate their makeup so as not to be the victim of their bodily chemistry. Let them reduce the percentage of chemicals, and obey the simple health rules—stand straight; breathe deeply; take exercise; work, play and eat and sleep, and give up worry about their chemicals."

PEDLER ACCUSED OF ATTACK ON WOMAN

South Hadley Falls, Nov. 8.—Eugene La Plante, an itinerant pedler of pins and needles, living at No. 186 High street, is under arrest charged with attacking Miss Parmaly Vandell, forty years old, of this town, on street. According to the story Miss Vandell told police, the pedler came to her door and asked if she wished to buy anything. When she let him in so that she might look at his wares, she said, he seized her and attacked her. Following the attack she was in a semi-stupefied condition. She managed to drag herself to a neighbor's house, where police were called.

La Plante was arrested a few hours later.

HYLAN VICTORY BY 368,000 IS PREDICTED

Mayor's Backers Expect Landslide for Him in New York Election Today

New York, Nov. 8.—Final prediction figures turned in to Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy indicated Mayor Hylan's re-election today by 368,000 plurality.

According to figures in the hands of Mr. Murphy, Manhattan, for which the Tammany organization is responsible, will give Mayor Hylan a plurality of not less than 75,000. This will be the largest ever cast for a Mayoralty candidate.

Mr. McCooey reported that Brooklyn, the Mayor's home borough, is good for 150,000 plurality. This is not as great a plurality as the Mayor secured in the entire city four years ago.

Arthur Murphy, the Bronx leader, predicted from 45,000 to 55,000 plurality for the Mayor in his borough.

Maurice F. Connolly forecast 18,000 for the Mayor in Queens and Michael J. Cahill promised 8,000 more in Richmond.

Chairman John H. Delaney of the Hylan League said:

"Our returns are so astounding that they are almost incredible. I fear to give them out for publication lest many supporters of the Mayor conclude there is to be such a sweep that it will not be necessary for them to vote."

John J. Lyons, Henry H. Curran's personal manager, said:

"The trend is toward Curran. I doubt if the plurality either way will be more than 75,000. If we can hold 75 per cent. of the women's vote we shall win. The women will settle this election."

Election eve betting on the Stock Exchange closed with Mayor Hylan a 7 to 1 favorite, while Curran money is very scarce.

Dana to Ask Allen to Act on Refusal to Dismiss Cambridge Employe

"If City Auditor Charles H. Thurston of Cambridge is paying Miss L. Marion Hardy, a stenographer in his office, from city funds, I shall report him to the attorney-general for prosecution for violating the Civil Service act."

Civil Service Commissioner Payson Dana made this uncompromising announcement today, following Thurston's refusal to discharge Miss Hardy. He added that conviction of violating the Civil Service act was punishable with a $500 fine.

Thurston and Dana have been at swords' points for weeks over the retention of Miss Hardy in the city auditor's office.

Dana's contention is that as she did not take a civil service examination when she was hired and has since failed to pass an examination she is not legally employed. Thurston's contention is that he hired her when stenographers were scarce and with the approval of the Civil Service Commission, although without going through the usual red tape.

Commissioner Dana said today that he had been informed by Thurston some time ago that the stenographer was not being paid from city funds. But he added that he had also heard that she was being paid indirectly from city funds, her employer drawing her salary under the head of "clerical expense."

"If that is true, I shall have no alternative but to report Mr. Thurston to the Attorney-General," said Dana. "A serious principle is involved. There is a clear violation of the Civil Service law."

PLUMBERS KEPT BUSY BY PAWTUCKET BOOM

Pawtucket, R. I. Nov. 8.—Increased activity in the building trade here has been evidenced during the past week. Plumbers assert that every member of their union is at present employed, while the agents of the union claims that he could find work for a dozen more. A building boom, a movement by property owners to replace old plumbing is believed responsible for the demand for the services of plumbers. Business is also good for contractors, painters, carpenters and other artisans in the Blackstone Valley.

WATSON SAYS LEGION WILL AID WEEKS

Senator Declares Organization Seeks to Perpetuate Military Spirit

Washington, Nov. 8.—Senator "Tom" Watson of Georgia today carried his fight with the army into the camps of the American Legion. He charged that Secretary of War Weeks was attempting to list the aid of the Legion "in an effort to whitewash" his charges that American soldiers were hanged without trial in France.

"And I expect him to rally to the Secretary of Wars aid," he added. "The American Legion is chiefly organized by former officers of the A. E. F. who want to perpetuate the military spirit in the United States."

Watson's remarks were provoked by a statement made by Secretary Weeks appealing to Rexford Mac-Nider, commander of the Legion, "to lend assistance toward obtaining all facts bearing upon [illegible] has been raised" by Senator Watson.

"It is to be expected that the American Legion would side with Secretary of War Weeks and against me," said Watson.

"If he attacked me on a number of occasions because I had the courage to stand up for the private in the ranks and against the officers, who bulldozed and maltreated him.

"During my campaign in Georgia last year I made charges such as I am making now. The American Legion attacked me and broke up one of my meetings.

"I have no fear of anything it can do. The great mass of former service men who did the real fighting do not belong to the American Legion."

Additional documents Senator Watson has placed before the committee contain many charges of brutality and execution of men without trial.

Henry Wells, writing from New York, alleges in a letter to Watson that a sergeant, who he thinks was named Grady and who was a member of the 26th Division, shot a private for talking back.

FUND BOOSTER

CRIPPLED BOY GIVES SAVINGS TO FEED POOR

will be some left to help buy another parcel of food.

In writing to the Christmas Fund editor, George wrote: "I have had trouble with my leg for the last four years, but Dr. MacAusland, my surgeon, says that I shall be able to walk without crutches during the next two years. We have taken the Boston American since 1917, and I have enjoyed every year contributing to the fund. I hope the fund will be greater this year than ever before. My sentiments and wishes I have stood during the past year and I wish that I might send much more, as I consider it a very worthy cause."

For the third successive year Hugh and Lillian Garrity, six-year-old twins of No. 223 Longwood avenue, Back Bay, are "saving up" for the Christmas Fund. They dropped in on the Christmas Fund editor to inform him that he could count on them again. Last year they made two visits with their pet bank to the Christmas Fund office. Their parents are teaching them to assist others less fortunate. The parents regard the American's Fund as an ideal medium through which to teach this lesson of unselfishness.

SET GOOD EXAMPLE.

The example set by these three children is refreshing. The little original Irvine lost is going to be much happier on Christmas Day when he thinks of the good deed he has done in assisting other boys and girls obtain something to eat. The thirty twins, too, are learning a valuable lesson that will help them in later years. The generous acts of this trio of kiddies is humbling to the Christmas Fund workers.

P. J. Hanlon, secretary of the Knights of St. Finbar, called at the Christmas Fund office and left $10 for the Fund, thought by his committee. A similar gift was made by the Gaelic League a couple days ago.

In sending a contribution of $2 to the fund, William H. Gardner wrote: "At the request of my daughter, Ruth Gardner (15½ years), I am sending check for $2 for your fund. She thinks it is a splendid thing for a big boy or girl to raise such a fund."

BRINGS HAPPINESS.

J. M. Laffin wrote, while forwarding $5: "I am pleased to be able, through the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, to help bring a little real happiness and good cheer to some home this Christmas. How better can one celebrate this great holiday?"

J. A. Hanson sent a note to the effect that "Every little bit helps" in the collection. Surely the kind of spirit we like. We want every one who can to assist in this great undertaking of feeding the impoverished at Christmas. It's not necessary to go to Europe to find half-starved people. There are plenty of them right in our midst.

Letters appealing for aid continue to pour into the American office. All of the writers tell the story of destitution, unemployment and illness. All agree that their Christmas dinners will be fitting affairs if they are not assisted. It's going to be "tough sledding" for hundreds of people in Boston and vicinity this Winter.

FATHER OUT OF WORK.

A South Boston child wrote as follows: "I am going to tell you that we are nine poor children. My father hasn't been working for nine months and we haven't very much to eat, and I am thinking of what will become of us when the cold weather comes. We have no coal. I am the oldest of the nine and I am thirteen years old. I hope you will be so good as to send us a basket with a chicken in it."

Through the courtesy of Sales Manager W. H. Hiss of the Franklin Motor Car Company, No. 616 Commonwealth avenue, a Franklin car was loaned to the Christmas Fund editor for work connected with the fund.

AUTOIST CLAIMS PERSECUTION BY POLICE

Tells Goodwin Record Was "Fixed" Because He Splashed Mud on Officer's Daughter

Declaring that he is being "persecuted" as a speeder by the Waltham police because his machine accidentally splashed mud on the dress of a daughter of a member of the force, Nathan Saltman of Cambridge appeared before the highway division of the public works department in the State House to present his appeal from the decision of Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

Goodwin had ordered Saltman's automobile operator's license revoked after the records showed he had been in court three times for over-speeding.

Through his attorney, Harry F. R. Dolan of Cambridge, Saltman charged that a Dorchester police officer and the clerk of the Dorchester Court conspired to make a false record against him.

SCORED BY GOODWIN.

Saltman's charges, which created a sensation at the hearing, were answered by the counter-charge of Registrar Goodwin, who declared that Saltman is known as a speeder, but that his political influence has many times saved him from being prosecuted in various communities.

"It is time for the politicians to keep their hands off where the lives of the people are at stake," Goodwin said. "Saltman ought to be taken off the road and shown that he cannot fix all cases."

Saltman admitted that he had been convicted this year in the Quincy Court of exceeding the speed limit, and also that he had been fined in the Waltham Court for a similar offence. He denied, however, that he had been before the Dorchester Court for speeding and had pleaded guilty.

DECISION RESERVED.

He had gone to court to answer the charge, he said, but had been informed that the case would not be prosecuted and had returned to his home.

Decision was reserved upon completion of the hearing.

According to the records of the Waltham Court, Saltman has been charged with violation of the automobile laws four times. On June 25, 1917, he was fined $10; on September 7, 1918, $20; on September 3, 1919, $10, and on September 24, 1920, the charge against him was filed.

BLAZE MENACES FACTORIES IN PROVIDENCE

Flames Destroy One Building and Damage Another in Jewelry Section

Providence, Nov. 8.—The jewelry manufacturing district was menaced by fire that destroyed a two and one-half-story frame building at No. 82 Page street early today.

The flames swept across to No. 91 Page street, a three-story brick building, and caused heavy damage there. The total damage is estimated at between $15,000 and $20,000, although no official figures have been obtained.

A night watchman at the Osby & Barton Jewelry Co. discovered the flames coming from the quarters of George M. Baker, owner of the frame structure, and the offices of Frank E. Miller, enameler, who occupies the second floor of the building.

By the time the firemen arrived, the building was a mass of flames, which proved difficult to extinguish. It is believed the fire started in the refining ovens of the Baker concern.

Boy Breaks His Bank for Simmons Endowment

The Simmons Endowment Fund has received gifts ranging from ten dollars to ten thousand, but it remained for Master Edward Payson Cleveland, five years old, of Houlton, Me., to break a bank for Simmons.

For Master Edward had 8 cents in his little pig bank, and he is a loyal mascot for Simmons. All his five years he has heard about Simmons from the Clevelands, who are her alumnae, but when his very favorite "Aunt Maddy" became active in the endowment campaign, Edward voted a straight Simmons ticket.

Edward felt the urge to help, and the broken china pig bank now holds cents, while the nickel is in the endowment office alongside a letter in a laborious childish scrawl:

"Dere Aunt Maddy: I am sending you 5 cents for your skol from my bank.

"EDWARD."

FITCHBURG MAN AFTER $5000 HEART BALM

Sues Woman He Says Jilted Him, Also Brings Action Against Three Others

Worcester, Nov. 8.—Charging that Mrs. Christina Richter of Clinton failed to carry out an agreement to marry him after the marriage license had been applied for, Julius Henry Ryll of Fitchburg has brought suit in Superior Court here against Mrs. Richter for $5,000 heart balm.

Ryll claims that, because of Mrs. Richter's alleged broken promise, he has been subjected to ridicule, reproach and contempt by his friends and acquaintances, and has been deprived of her society and comfort.

Ryll accuses Fred Benker, Martin Benker and Emma Ryll of Clinton of conspiring to prevent Mrs. Richter from wedding him, and has brought a suit for $10,000 against them.

According to Ryll, the affair between him and Mrs. Richter bloomed throughout the Summer. With the coming of Autumn marriage was definitely decided upon, he asserted, and on October 3 application for the marriage license was made. This, he declared, was just two days after he had popped the question and had been accepted.

When the time came for the wedding Mrs. Richter changed her mind, he alleged.

WORLD'S FUTURE IN ARMS ISSUE, HAPGOOD SAYS

Correct Decisions by Conference Are of Great Import to All Nations, Writer Declares

By NORMAN HAPGOOD,
Staff Correspondent of the Boston American.

Washington, Nov. 8.—You cannot walk down H street, or Sixteenth street, or drop in at the Cosmos Metropolitan or Racquet Club, or the lobby of any principal hotel, without bumping into some of the best minds.

In fact the best minds in this town have become thicker than policemen in ordinary times. If the administration does not pull off its world-program it will not be for lack of loose intellect stretching all around the streets within a mile of the White House.

It is extraordinary the number of these best minds that express the idea that the mechanical ingenuity of man has out-run his wisdom, and that therefore the problems are too big for him, and he is likely to destroy his present civilization, as the civilization of Egypt, Asia Minor, India, China, Greece and Rome have either died or deteriorated in the past.

MECHANICAL ADVANCE.

A Cabinet officer illustrated our mechanical advance by the following estimate.

Recently 4,000 Marines visited one of the battle grounds of the Civil War. These 4,000 Marines, with their equipment, could defeat the combined Union and Confederate armies, with their equipment.

Moreover, they could do it without themselves suffering a single casualty, as the other side would never get near enough to them to do them any damage.

But suppose we go back only to the Spanish war. One ship, like the Pennsylvania or Wyoming, if attacked, could withstand the combined fleets of Dampson and Cervera, and could probably destroy them all before they could get out of range.

But it does not do a whole lot of good to increase power unless we know what to do with it.

Another of the best minds calls my attention to a poem of Goethe's in which the powers of a magician are gotten hold of by his apprentice, the result being disaster.

Goethe's comment is to the effect that it is no use wishing for the powers of a wise man.

POWER WITHOUT WISDOM.

If those powers came to an ordinary man the only result would be that the power was separated from the wisdom.

Also a best mind recalls to me the fairy tale of the three wishes, as expressing the belief of the superlative best mind that the trouble with the world just now is that men do not wish for the right things.

A fairy told a peasant and his wife that she would grant them three things for which either of them expressed a wish. They were delighted and began to talk over a lot of fine things. After a while they forgot the main subject and began to get hungry.

"I wish," said the wife, absent-mindedly, "that I had a roast sausage."

Immediately the sausage appeared on the table, angered at the waste of one of the three precious wishes the husband burst out in a rage. "I wish," he cried, "that the sausage was on the end of your nose."

Immediately it appeared there. There was no way to undo that error of anger except to use up the one remaining great treasure, the third wish, by wishing the sausage off the wife's nose again.

RESULT OF CARELESSNESS.

So the great powers granted by the fairy brought no more good than those two careless and quarrelsome peasants than the powers of nature bring us if we do not use our brains in deciding what to do with them.

Senator Lenroot observed the other day:

"They could not tell by the looks of his track

Whether he was coming or going back."

What makes the situation in Washington so thrilling just now is that everybody is watching intently to see whether or not the conference is to carry us forward or by discouragement throw us back, and people in general become more and more convinced that much of the world's future hangs on a correct decision.

I was in Paris a while during the conference there and I saw nothing of the mood that prevails here now. There were a few people who took the view I have been describing, but they were not enough to create a general mood. The interesting thing about this point of view now is that it is absolutely the prevailing mood.

PLENTY OF CYNICISM.

I do not mean that there is no doubt, or even cynicism. There is plenty of it. There are plenty who express the opinion that the conference will not do anything. Maybe there are as many who believe it will accomplish nothing as there are who believe it will do most of what it sets out to do.

But both factions, those who expect much and those who expect nothing, will, on the whole, agree that if it does fail to mark out lines of progress and safety, this old world will be in a perilous state.

The reserve of most fat people is that it is too hard, too troublesome to use enough to force the weight down. Marmola Prescription Tablets overcome all these difficulties. They are absolutely harmless, entail no dieting or exercise, and have the added advantage of cheapness. A case is sold at one dollar by all druggists the world over, or send the price direct to the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich. Now that you know this, buy them no matter for being fat, but end reduce steadily and easily without going through long stages of tiresome exercise and starvation diet or fear of bad effects.—Advertisement.

WHERE'S MY HUSBAND?

Wife must follow hubby wherever he's hiding? Well, that was Mrs. Johnson's idea and lawyer Hoy thought it was "pretty sound law," so they went ahead—and got away with it! See the pictures, read the story, in next Sunday's Boston Sunday Advertiser.

TWO GRAND PRIX WINNERS WILL TEACH HERE

Frenchmen, Both Soldiers, Coming to Harvard and Technology as Professors

Two distinguished architects, Albert Ferran and Jean Jacques Haffner, both winners of the Grand Prix de Rome, one of the highest honors to which architects aspire, have accepted invitations to come to this country to teach. Ferran will have charge of design at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he will hold a professorship, while Haffner will be professor of design at the School of Architecture at Harvard.

Upon their arrival, it is said that Boston will be the only place in the country where two Grand Prix winners are united in teaching architecture in schools which co-operate closely. The departments at Harvard and M. I. T. frequently engage in "conjunctive problems" in architecture, a fact which will give Farran and Haffner a chance to work together and supplement each other's gifts.

Albert Ferran, who will begin his work at the architectural department of the M. I. T. at the opening of the second term, was born in San Francisco in August, 1886, of French parents. His father had become a naturalized American citizen. He lived with his parents in California until 1902 and then went to Paris. He was a pupil of Victor Laloux. Ferran spent a large part of the five years of war at Salonica with the French troops.

Jean Jacques Haffner, who will become a professor of design at Harvard, is an Alsatian. He was born in Stuttgart some 36 years ago, and from 1897 to 1913 studied at the Beaux Arts. He served during the war for four years and was severely wounded. He will begin his work at Harvard about January.

'Warren G. Harding,' a Rooster, Smokes Cigarettes

By Associated Press.

Paris, Ky., Nov. 8.—Paris has been able from time to time to boast of freaks of the animal kingdom, including five legged calves and three legged chickens, but for the first time it has as its guest a rooster that smokes cigarettes.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl B. Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. Orion Scheie of Columbus, Ohio, who stopped in Paris today, on their way to Florida, had with them two white Wyandotte roosters, "Warren G. Harding" and "Jimmie Cox," both of which have been trained to do a few tricks.

Warren G., numbers among his accomplishments the ability to smoke a cigarette.

FOUR MINISTERS ACCEPT OFFER TO 'CARRY HOD'

Will Get Closeup of Working Conditions While Labor Men Occupy Pulpits

Four ministers have accepted the invitation of the Boston Central Labor Union to don overalls and work with labor an hour or a day to get the "labor viewpoint" on the capital-labor controversy.

Next Sunday many ministers will speak on "Religious Ideals in Industries," and the Central Labor Union decided it would open the ranks of union workmen to the ministers to see first-hand conditions under which they work.

Labor leaders have been invited to speak to congregations and the plan to allow clergymen to don overalls is offered in reciprocity.

The ministers who have accepted the invitation of the C. L. U. are Rev. Fletcher D. Parker of the Congregational Missionary Society, No. 12 Beacon street; Rev. Newton C. Fetter, assistant pastor of the First Baptist Church, Rev. Dr. Doremus Scudder, Greater Boston Federation of Churches and Rev. Henry I. Badley, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Temple street. Others will probably join the ranks of the "labor ministers."

A committee consisting of P. Harry Jennings, Albert Johnson and Miss Gertrude Oppenheim, representing the C. L. U., will put these men to work on different jobs in Boston. They will be given construction jobs, teaming and other work, so that they may get closeups of labor at various angles.

The clergyman will don overalls, sign his name to a permit issued by the union and make himself useful with trowel or hod for a short time, while he is a union man.

The teamsters, milk wagon drivers, garment workers, steam shovellers, boilermakers and all crafts of organized labor have welcomed the pastors to their ranks.

ANOTHER Hovey Glove Sale! What good news to the thousands of women who took advantage of the wonderful sale some months ago—a sale still fresh in the minds of all Boston.

At that time we offered 60,000 pairs, all of which were sold in an almost incredibly short time.

We have been asked repeatedly if we could not obtain more of these gloves. We have been offered many exceptional lots, but they did not measure up to Hovey standards, and were declined for that reason.

NOW we are glad to inform our patrons, and the public in general, that we have secured 8,000 pairs of fine French gloves, made of the best selected French skins, and recommended by us for their wearing qualities, fit and comfort.

An unusual opportunity for Christmas Gifts!

AS IN A MIRROR! BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Fashionable Folk Out in Force at Opening of Boston Opera Season

By BETTY ALDEN.

WHILE for three magic hours Esther Ferrabini of the San Carlo Opera Company lived the role of a passionate, happy-go-lucky, and ever sweetly-insolent "Carmen," the Boston Opera House in the Back Bay assumed its old-time glory, recalling the days when Boston had an opera company of its own.

It was the opening night of the San Carlo Opera Company. The house was filled, the "horseshoe" ring of boxes harbored splendidly dressed women of Boston's smart set, and a gratifyingly long line of limousines surrounded the Opera House on all sides. Altogether it was a sight good to see.

Mrs. Edward H. James (Louise Cushing) of Chance River square was in the party with her brother, the well-known Grafton Cushing. The James family recently returned from a Summer abroad with their two charming daughters, the older, Olivia James, who made her debut last year, and the younger, Mary James, who is one of this season's debs. Their generous uncle, Grafton Cushing, played fairy godfather to Oilivia when she came out, and now one hears that he is to give an equally festive presentation for Mary.

Mrs. Curtis Guild of Marlboro street, who shone and shimmered in a black gown, heavily jetted, had a box of her own, but "visited" awhile with Mrs. Channing Cox, who was gowned in apricot satin. It was interesting to see these two women together, as Mrs. Guild is the wife of the former Governor Guild.

The Braggiotti sisters, Berthe and Francesca, who were with their father, Isidore Braggiotti, were the centre of considerable attraction when the usual promenading occurred during intermission. It was natural that they should be, for practically all Boston society is aware of the fact that these talented girls are to appear at the Friday evening's performance of the San Carlo Opera Company, as well as at the matinee a week from tomorrow when they will do their much-talked-of dance, "The Reapers." Last night both girls were gowned alike, and for the longest time I could not decide just what color would best describe their dresses. Finally I decided on "red-dish gold," made of a beautiful, shimmering cloth, with long, flowing sleeves of chiffon. Both Francesca and Berthe wore head-bands matching their gowns, and Berthe, I noted, wore shoes and stockings to match also.

An impressive box was that of Marchese Ferante di Ruffano, Royal Italian consul, the Italian flag having been draped directly beneath the Marchese's box. The Marquise was charmingly garbed in a dress of black Spanish lace. In fact, black seems to have fallen into high favor for evening gowns this Winter, and any number of lovely creations in black were to be seen last night.

The S. Parker Bremers were there, Mrs. Bremer in blue brocade, and the daughter, Edith Bremer, in pale yellow chiffon. Mrs. Wallace Goodrich (Madeline Boardman) who was accompanied by her husband, was gowned in black, as she is in mourning for her father. Mrs. Robert Jordan of Beacon street wore a gown of purple satin, and Mrs. James Jackson, in the next box, was attired in black.

Others present last night were the Frederick J. Cottons, Mrs. George H. Monks, Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Alvin T. Fuller, Mrs. Harriett Fearing, Mrs. Frederick Winsor and Mrs. Stephen Townsend.

Two important charity events are listed on today's calendar. From 10 until 5 o'clock the annual bazar of the South End Day Nursery Auxiliary will be held at the Copley-Plaza. Among the patronesses for the affair, which is in charge of Mrs. Frank H. Merrill, president of the auxiliary, are the following: Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, Mrs. Channing Cox, Mrs. Paul Revere Frothingham, Mrs. Thomas Nelson Perkins, Mrs. Augustus L. Thorndike, Mrs. J. Livingston Grandin, and Mrs. Galen L. Stone.

The busy group of women in charge of the Cambridge Hospital League Fair, which takes place at Brattle Hall, Cambridge, from 10 until midnight today, have planned no end of novelties to make this annual event the best ever. Besides the regular sale of food, candy, vegetables and so on, there is to be a children's entertainment from 2 until 5 o'clock. Then at 8:30 comes the cabaret, at which Mary Sigourney, Elisabeth Cassell and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Sortwell are to dance. General dancing, which will last until midnight, will follow the cabaret, and the sale will continue throughout the evening for the benefit of those unable to attend during the day.

MISS JEAN COTTON.

Miss Jean Cotton, a debutante of this season, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick J. Cotton of Beacon street, were among the boxholders at the opening performance of the San Carlo Opera Company last night at the Opera House. Photo by Bachrach.

"Castle Farm," Charles River, and Mrs. Augustin H. Parker of "Noanet Farm," Charles River, were among the Boston contingent sojourning at Hot Springs, Va., who rode over the trails on horseback over the week end.

Boston society will be interested to learn of the engagement between Miss Sylvia Lord Seymour of New York, and Darnall Wallace, a student at Harvard University, son of Mrs. Arthur Sinclair, Jr., of Madison avenue, N. Y. His fiance is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Origen S. Seymour of Lawrence, L. I.

Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons is to take charge of the doughnut sale of the Salvation Army at the Copley-Plaza the coming week.

Judge and Mrs. Charles Thornton Davis and Miss Marcia Davis have returned from their Summer home at Marblehead and will be at No. 31 Allerton street, Brookline, for the Winter. Miss Davis is continuing her work at the Art Museum.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Hamlen have returned with their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hamlen, from Wayland, and are at their town house, No. 32 Gloucester street. Miss Hamlen is one of this season's debutantes.

Mrs. Everett Morss opened her house at No. 115 Commonwealth avenue, yesterday afternoon, for an author's reading, in aid of the Radcliffe College endowment fund. Among the notable authors were Mrs. Lars Anderson, Eleanor Hallowell Abbott (Mrs. Fordyce Coburn), and Josephine Preston Peabody (Mrs. Lionel Marks).

Miss Miriam Ladd of Milton has been re-elected president of the 1918-19 Reading Circle; Miss Lucia Wheatland of Beacon street, secretary, and Miss Dorothy Thorndike of Beacon street, treasurer.

Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer will be one of the speakers at the eleventh annual luncheon and meeting of the National Civic Federation to be held next Thursday at the Copley-Plaza. Mrs. Thayer will speak on "Immigration." Society women will act as waitresses during the luncheon.

CHARGES FRAUD IN SAUGUS REALTY DEAL

Salem, Nov. 8.—A bill in equity has been filed in Superior Court by Edgar L. Ryerson, as trustee in bankruptcy of Henry G. O'Neill of Saugus, against Henry G. O'Neill and Hilma T. O'Neill, both of Saugus, and Christine Keegan of Malden. The bill states that November 16, 1918, while Henry G. O'Neill was insolvent, he wrongfully conveyed real estate in Saugus to Hilma T. O'Neill, without consideration, and for the purpose of delaying and defrauding his creditors.

The bill further states that on June 2, 1919, Hilma T. O'Neill gave a second mortgage on the property to Christine Keegan of Malden. The plaintiff claims that the property is part of the estate of the bankrupt.

ALL PICTURES IN BOOK TEST NOT EASY

Artist Has Drawn a Few Tough Problems to Puzzle Contestants

Have any difficulty finding the Correct Title for the Book Test picture printed yesterday. Of course you didn't. And today's is easier still!

Isn't that the proper way to begin the Boston American's $5,000 Book Title Picture Test? Want everybody to understand the modus operandi, see the machinery go 'round, know "how the works."

Sixty days. Sixty pictures, and then:

| | |
|---|---|
| FIRST AWARD | $1,000 |
| SECOND AWARD | 500 |
| THIRD AWARD | 250 |
| FOURTH AWARD | 100 |
| FIFTH AWARD | 100 |
| SIXTH AWARD | 100 |
| SEVENTH AWARD | 100 |
| NINTH AWARD | 100 |
| 100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH | 1,000 |
| 110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH | 550 |
| 110 AWARDS OF $3 EACH | 330 |

And all for finding and writing Correct Titles!

TITLES PRINTED DAILY.

Finding them where? In the List of Titles printed with each picture. Today, for example. Look at the picture. Study it a moment. Now, the List of Titles. Run your eyes over that a minute. Which is the Correct Title? Found it? Write it on the dotted line and wait for Picture No. 2, in tomorrow's Boston American.

A test based upon the titles of well known books. Sixty pictures, drawn by an expert for the purpose of illustrating these titles "for contest purposes." Please observe the last three words, "for contest purposes." Mr. Artist does not mean that all of you will get this every title correctly. If that should happen the Boston American would lose all its presses, linotypes, poets and everything.

Mr. Artist challenges you. He says, "Come on! Get these titles if you can! Many of them are easy enough for the A. B. C class. Some are harder to find. A few will be tough problems, but when the game is over I shall be happy to demonstrate for your satisfaction that the Correct Titles have appeared from day to day in the List and that they were those titles which fitted the Test pictures better than any other in the day-by-day List."

What do you say to that challenge?

DO YOUR BEST.

You need not take it too seriously. It may not be necessary to get EVERY title right, in order to earn the $1,000 award. In the preceding title tests the high marks were fifty-three and fifty-two, out of a possible sixty. While it is possible, it is unlikely that any participant in this or any other test of the sort will turn in a 60-hit to match the artist's 60 pictures.

It will cost nothing to try. The Test Editor assumes that you are a Boston American "regular" or you would not be perusing these lines. You buy the Boston American for its editorials, for Mr. Brisbane's column, for fiction, comic page and colored pictures, for its news—no other evening newspaper in Boston comes to you every day with the complete wire service of both International News AND The Associated Press.

The $5,000 Book Test is what the theatrical advertisements call an "extra added attraction." You are sure to find it enjoyable, entertaining, instructive and, whether you finish among the leaders or not, profitable.

GET PAPER REGULARLY.

Test Pictures will be printed only on week-days, remember, and only in the Boston American. Make sure of having the paper every day by placing a standing order with your newsdealer. You will not be satisfied with anything but the full-size pictures. If you paste them into a scrapbook you will want them of uniform size. The one and only way is to be sure of that is to get the Boston American every day throughout the test.

Like yesterday's you will observe that today's picture is a picture without words. No talk in it. Nobody saying anything to anybody. We now have fifty of the pictures and this is true of all but four. On each of these four there is a single word and no more. A genuine "picture test" you see. No chatter, to confuse or mislead the unwary. Only a picture.

The Book Test Editor saw fit yesterday to post a warning to all who may think a test of this kind is "like finding money." It is not. It is not a guessing contest. Lucky numbers are not drawn from a hat. We cannot "place" an award in Worcester, one in Lowell, one in Fall River, one in Portland, one in Laconia and so on.

AWARDS MUST BE EARNED.

Awards must go to those who earn them and they can be earned only by finding and writing Correct Titles. If you write and send in the largest number of Correct Titles the first award is yours whether your home is in Holyoke, Haverhill or Hooksett. The top award in the Song Title Test was won by a young lady of Newbury, a town about the size of your thumb. Most of the other large awards, if true, were taken by residents of Greater Boston. This time, for all that the editor can do about it, the rule may be reversed and all but one or two awards go to some Newburyp.

It is not a test for everybody. Words have various meanings. For his more troublesome pictures it is more than likely that our friend the artist has taken one of the unusual definitions of some innocent-looking word. You'll have to watch! You'll have to understand the List of Titles. That list, as the writer has said more than once, is quite important as the picture. Don't forget that. Pay attention to the picture, but remember that the List of Titles is of exactly as much importance.

TAKE NO CHANCES.

This is going to be the biggest and most successful contest the Boston American ever conducted. We know THAT much, now. Many newsdealers will be telling the "all sold out" story. Take no chances. We CANNOT supply back numbers of the paper. We are not in competition with the newsdealer.

Tell the man you MUST have the Boston American regularly while the Book Test continues.

If you enter the Test make up your mind to buck the line hard and carry away one of the worth-while awards. Faint heart never won a thousand. YOU can win, if you put your mind to it, and the Boston American will be glad to write your name on the biggest check of all.

Tomorrow, Book Test Picture No. 2.

REPUBLICANS TO RUSH NEW TAX BILL

Measure to Net $3,250,000,000 Expected to Reach Conference by Thursday

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 8.—The tax revision bill now faces its third rewriting, this time by the House and Senate conferees.

The measure finally was passed early today by the Senate, 38 to 24, at the end of a continuous session lasting nearly sixteen hours. It will be returned to the House when that body reconvenes tomorrow and Republican leaders there plan to send it to conference Thursday. It may reach the President for his approval late in the month.

A rough estimate, treasury experts say the bill in its present form would net approximately $2,750,000,000, or $200,000,000 less than the present law and about the amount of revenue which treasury officers have said the government must have. Eventually this bill, the experts assert, would reduce the nation's tax toll by about $750,000,000 a year.

EXPECT CHANGES.

While they undoubtedly will make many changes in the measure, the conferees are not expected to materially alter the total of revenue. As the bill now stands there are four three major provisions on which the House and Senate agree. They are repeal of the excess profits tax and the transportation taxes on next January 1, and the retention of the present tax on corporation capital stock.

Other outstanding provisions of the bill are:

A reduction in the maximum surtax rate from 65 per cent. on all over $1,000,000 to 50 per cent. on all over $2,000,000 as against the House reduction to 32 per cent. on all over $40,000.

Retention of the House provision granting increased normal exemptions of $400 to heads of families having net incomes of $5,000 or less and $200 on account of dependents.

Repeal of the $2,000 normal exemption to corporations except in the case of those having net incomes of $25,000 or less.

An increase in the estate tax maximum rate from 25 per cent. on all over $10,000,000 to 40 per cent. on all over $100,000,000. Increased taxes on medicinal beer, wine and whiskey.

TAX ON GIFTS.

A provision taxing gifts of property by any persons at rates ranging from 1 per cent. on the amount between $20,000 and $50,000 to 25 per cent. on all over $10,000,000.

Repeal of the excise taxes on chewing gum, sporting goods, musical instruments, electric fans, and soap and other articles as well as the stamp taxes on proprietary medicines and toilet preparations. The levies on fountain drinks and ice cream also are out.

The big fight between the Senate and House is expected to develop over the income surtax rate, with the general belief at both ends of the Capitol that the conferees will reach a compromise at a figure around 40 per cent. House Republican leaders believe they can kill the movement among some Republicans from Western States to have the House instruct its managers to accept the Senate maximum rate.

BARRIE PLAY AT HOLLIS PROVES ENCHANTING

Ruth Chatterton Wins New Triumph in Title Role of "Mary Rose"

In "Mary Rose," which had its first Boston presentation at the Hollis Street Theatre last night, Barrie has given us another of his popular, happy, and indulgent stories tilted unexpectedly here and there and with a decidedly novel theme. But always it is Barrie; it bears the individual trademark, his whimsicality and his wistful romance.

George Bernard Shaw once said of Barrie that "he sees no further than his stories—conceives any discrepancy between them and the world as a shortcoming on the world's part, and is only too happy to be able to rearrange matters in a pleasant way." And the public seems only too happy to let him rearrange matters as he wills.

Barrie has the knack, and it is much more than a mere knack, of giving his audiences toroush enjoyment, blissful at times, and at others nevertheless enchanting. He has a keen sense of human traits and always gives a generous assortment of them in each of his stories. "Mary Rose" is no exception to this rule.

"Mary Rose" was played throughout the early part of 1920 in London and last year New York saw it for a season. Ruth Chatterton has stepped into the shoes of Maude Adams as a Barrie heroine, and with entire success, too. She has the delicate charm that suits the playwright's very fanciful and often plausibly to us imaginative weavings. Last night she played the role of Mary Rose with lightness, understanding and with a sense of wonder that brought out the mystifying qualities Barrie wove into the piece.

Tom Nesbitt is seen in a dual role, that of the husband, Simon Blake, and as the son, Harry. Mr. Nesbitt appeared in the original production in London, and also during the New York run of the piece. He handles his role with a sure, human touch. He contrasts strongly with the quaintness and seriousness of Mary Rose with his bantering, scoffing manner, yet changes to softer moments with ease and naturalness.

Aspleodid bit of playing was done by Guy Buckley as the old chieftain, Cameron, a fine, pride, straightforwardness and bluntness of the character gave him opportunities for playing, opportunities which would be overlooked by many players and mangled by others. Mr. Buckley saw and made the most of these.

LA SYLPH SEEN IN PLEASING DANCE ACT

Lovers of artistic dancing have a treat in store for them at the Majestic Theatre this week. La Sylphe, in a new specialty of dances entitled "Behind the Mask," in which she appears with Ralph Fletcher Seiler, is an artistic and highly pleasing act. Fully as pleasing as the dancing is the extraordinary stage setting.

Lillian Fitzgerald, vivacious and decidedly clever, does an excellent turn which is a real treat. Assisting her is Charles F. Aldrich, in a series of impersonations.

As a real humorist, who makes his audience forget dull care without an effort, Walter Weems, artist of "Southern Humorists," is a joy forever. Individuality fairly oozes from him. Alexandra Carlisle and Harry Cornell Clarke, in a humorous skit entitled, "It Can Be Done," is a pleasing bit.

Perhaps one of the most artistic exhibitions of very excellent posing is given by Maria Lo and her company of girls.

Other acts on the bill include "Chuck" Callahan and "Bobby" Hiss in "Two Sports from Michigan"; "Go Get 'Em Rogers"; "Three Chums," in a singing act, and Lucy Gillett, and company. The usual moving pictures and a Mutt and Jeff comedy conclude the bill.

GORDON'S CENTRAL SQ.—Achieving a distinct triumph because of its beauty and artistry, George Fitzmaurice's splendid Paramount picture, "Experience" was presented with unusual success at Gordon's Central Sq. Theatre last night.

BOSTON THEATRE—Not every home in America is seething with conflicts of emotion as does the domestic circle pictured in "A Man's Home" at the Boston Theatre this week, where this unusual film began a week's engagement yesterday.

WALDRON'S CASINO—Abe Reynolds, burlesque comedian, who has a host of admirers in Greater Boston, was the big bit of the two performances at Waldron's yesterday, appearing as the leading fun-maker in a new burlesque, named in his honor, "Abe Reynolds' Revlew."

Plays That Remain

WILBUR THEATRE—"The Rose Girl," which keeps up its capacity audiences at the Wilbur, can be largely expressed in two words—mirth and romance. As a matter of fact it is the peculiarly happy blending of these two elements which makes this bright musical piece its unique quality among current musical productions.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE—There is plenty of entertaining why Holbrook Blinn in "The Bad Man," at the Plymouth, has become the most-talked-about stage delight of the day. The play is praised as "different" with comedy as well as thrills and laughter and Mr. Blinn has come into his own as a comedian.

SHUBERT THEATRE—The "Passing Show of 1921," at the Shubert speeds spiritly through its twenty-six scenes to airs that have real melody. It reveals marvels of gorgeousness with each setting. Even the girls are the prettiest that have ever come from the famed Winter Garden.

GLOBE THEATRE—Douglas Fairbanks, in "The Three Musketeers," based on the immortal novel by Alexander Dumas, is being continued at the Globe Theatre, where this picture has been tracking all week. As the brave and dashing D'Artagnan, Fairbanks has a role temperamentally ideal, in fact one that might have been written especially for him.

TREMONT THEATRE—At the Tremont Temple, yesterday, "Over the Hill," the great screen story of mother love, admirably produced by William Fox, began the eleventh week of its engagement.

MARY PICKFORD CHARMING IN DUAL ROLE

When we read the announcements that "Little Lord Fauntleroy" would be played by Mary Pickford, we did not realize that Little Lord Fauntleroy's mother would also be played by the versatile little star. Yet such is the ambition of the actress and such are the possibilities of the amazing camera that it is possible for her to play a dual role.

And unlike the spoken stage it is not necessary that one character can be gotten off before the other character comes on. Duble exposure enables the Little Lord and his mama to converse and even kiss!

The story was one of the most popular ever written and since its first appearance in 1886, from the pen of Frances Hodgson Burnett it has had a steady sale to young and old until the present.

Miss Pickford has had the good taste to follow very closely the original tale, without any of the elaborate interpollations which the flossy movie directors love to indulge in. There is no barking back to Babylon as there was in "Male and Female"; the Himalayas of the "Admirable Crichton" which must have convulsed the author of the play, James M. Barrie.

The scene of the play is laid in 1886, which enables Miss Pickford to wear the picturesque costume associated with the boy part and the quaint dresses of the period, which enable her to give the necessary contrasts as the mother.

Dramatic art, perhaps, forgotten what a very human and natural romance Miss Burnett has had written, the different from the stories for children which have come down from the same period. She had feeling for the pathos and self-sacrificing was the little mother who gave up her darling boy so that he might be restored to his earl, no rhe fascination of the boy who entwined himself around his grandfather's heart until the old man admitted the banished mother also into his good graces.

Very great care was taken in the settings, both the old Boston grocery store of 1886, with Mr. Hobbs, its proprietor, played skillfully by James Marcus and the old Earl, played with fine taste by Claude Gillingwater. Though on a smaller canvas than the "Three Musketeers" picture, Douglas Fairbanks presented in the same house last week, "Little Lord Fauntleroy" had the same careful and accurate presentation.

"AIDA" IS PRESENTED AT ARLINGTON THEATRE

The opening performance of "Aida" was given last night at the Arlington Theatre by the Boston Society of Singers before a fashionable and full house. The principles interpreted their parts in a manner that evoked generous applause from the appreciative audience, and more than once they were recalled to the footlights. Under the direction of Max Fichandler the orchestra rendered adequate support to the singers.

Lois Ewell, who sang the title role, portrayed her part with rare dramatic power that thrilled the audience. She was especially brilliant in her interpretation of the last three scenes.

The role of Amneris, the King of Egypt's daughter, was taken by Stella De Mette, who shared honors with her Ethiopian slave, and rival lover for Rhadames, Aida, by her vivid emotional acting.

Rialy Dascalo, as Amonasaro, king of Ethiopia and father of Aida, was tenaly dramatic in the second scene of the second act.

Herbert L. Waterous, as Ramfis, the High Priest, pleased the audience with his finished acting and rich voice.

The Boston Society of Singers whose purpose it is to present the best operas in English, has been highly successful in the presentation of Verdi's great Oriental work, and with a continuance of such excellent productions, it should have a most successful season.

'BEGGAR MAID' AT THE PARK THEATRE

"Why Girls Leave Home" and "The Barricade" Are Other Two Features

"Why Girls Leave Home," which is now showing at the Park Theatre, most decidedly comes under the head of "big pictures," because it is big in theme and direct in treatment. The theme may be readily realized from the title of the picture and it is a problem that many parents have been called upon to face.

"Why Girls Leave Home" goes right at the heart of the problem and does not deviate in the slightest from its purpose of presenting a clearcut and constructive story that reveals not only the reasons but skilfully suggests a correction of them.

A new "art dramatic" movement in motion picture has been ushered in, dramatizing the great masterpieces of art in moving pictures, and Triart Productions, of New York, backed by a board including some of this country's greatest artists and art patrons, is carrying out the idea.

The first picture made its appearance as an initial feature is "The Beggar Maid," based on Sir Edward Burne-Jones' famous painting, and the poem of King Cophetua and the Beggar Maid by Tennyson.

The star of this picture is a newcomer to the screen, Mary Astor, a seven-year-old school girl, Reginald Denny was cast as the youth. The story of the "Beggar Maid" is a simple one. The three principals directly responsible for the picture are Herbert Blache, who directed, Lejaren A. Hiller, art director, and Arthur Maude, who wrote the scenario.

"The Barricade," which is the third feature, delivers a powerful sermon against false pride and prejudice, but it no time does it become preachy. It is sheer entertainment of the most interesting character.

Other Theatres

LOEW'S ORPHEUM—The character of the bill presented at Loew's Orpheum Theatre yesterday is one that not even the most critical amusement seeker could possibly find fault with. The Somerville, comprising six splendid acts, is topped by Fred La Reine and Company, offering a scientific and really novelty. Other good acts include Pearl Abbott and Company, Moore and Lyons, Mahoney and Cecil, Walter West and Hurley and Hurley.

GAYETY THEATRE—"Jingle Jingle" was the current attraction at that opened a week's engagement at the Gayety Theatre yesterday with two performances of unfailing merit, a record for producing laughs. The burlesque is divided into two side-splitting comedies and eight scenes. Harry Steppe, undoubtedly one of the funniest Hebrew comedians on the stage, heads a cast that exceeds in cleverness any company seen in burlesque in Boston for many seasons.

A big feature of the show is the display of Parisian fashion creations by Stella Morrissey, known in the theatrical world as the "perfect prima donna."

SOMERVILLE PLAYERS—There is a very good reason why the Somerville Players ought to play to capacity houses at every performance this week. The management has selected Avery Hopwood's sensational farce, "Nothing But Lies," presented yesterday afternoon and evening for the first time hereabouts and greeted with much more than ordinary enthusiasm.

The comedy is deserving of generous responsive inasmuch as it serves as a delightful evening's entertainment. To those familiar with the works of this eminent author, it may sound almost incredible to say that "Our Little Wife" is without doubt his best work, which gives you an idea of the entertaining qualities of this wee, naughty farce. When you consider that among the list of notable successes contributed to the stage is the notable "Fair and Warmer."

BABE RUTH IS BIG ATTRACTION AT KEITH'S

Keith's theatre here was the scene of Babe Ruth's stage debut last night. The star of baseball makes his bid for histrionic honors in a sketch called "Back Home." As was expected much of it revolves around the affairs of the diamond.

The slugger also sings a bit. He is assisted in the act by Wellington Cross. Although Ruth is the central other good acts on the bill, Ruth will be the chief attraction at the vaudeville theatre this week.

Eddie Russell appears in "A Man of Affairs," a playlet in four scenes. Hamilton and Jack Barnes are seen in "Just Fun," while Margaret Young introduced new songs.

Frank Weber, Fred Beck and Jack Fraser offer a combination of quips and song. Jack McLallen, and May Carson, Anite Diaz monkeys, Edwin Pauli and Edna Faulkner with the news reel complete the program.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

By FRIEDA DAVIS

SESSUE HAYAKAWA.

AGAIN we see an actor combining the task of starring with that of writing his own vehicle, and again we find that it can be done, but not very successfully. Sessue Hayakawa has chosen to write his own play for the Robertson-Cole production, "The Swamp," playing it in the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week. Strangely enough, Robertson-Cole let him do it, or possibly they couldn't stop him.

"The Swamp" is a laggard story of a Chinaman who befriends the cast-off wife of Spencer Wellington and her small son. He takes the boy into partnership with him — selling vegetables — and manages to keep Mary from leaving thrown out into the streets by the stony-hearted landlord and to bring her successfully through a severe illness.

He finds that selling vegetables isn't the road to fame and fortune and therefore he takes to telling fortunes, with the help of young Buster, Mary's boy. He breaks Wellington in his wanderings and manages to break up his affair with a New York heiress. In the end he, this is the Chinaman all the time, finds Mary is to marry the new rent-collector, and the last we see of him is sorrowfully leading away his horse and is apparently off to his old sweetheart in Japan.

Hayakawa did some exceptionally good work as Wang, but we have come to expect good acting from this Japanese actor. He is one of the drawing cards of the screen—but not as a story-writer. Hesaie Lee, an erstwhile star, also does excellently as Mary, who nearly sinks in "the swamp." She plays with restraint and feeling. Little Frankie Lee, one of the best child actors on the screen, is getting a little too old or too sophisticated for the very-small-boy type, for he overplays consistently.

"HAM" HAMILTON.

A WORD should be given to the comedy at the Modern and Beacon Theatres this week. "Ham" Hamilton, in a delightful two-reel farce that borders more nearly on the Chaplin comedies than any we have seen.

I don't recall the name of the picture, but it contains one of the most amusing scenes imaginable, that in which the hero (?) and the policeman chasing him are overcome by opium fumes. Slow motion photography is used here to startling effect. Chaplin could scarcely have done it better. It ranks with his Heaven scene in "The Kid."

INVITED TO LECTURE IN STORES ON ARCHITECTURE

Professor William Emerson, head of the department of architecture of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has been invited to deliver three lectures on architecture to the various department stores of Boston for the benefit of the workers in these stores. The lectures will be held at least pay R. Clipston Storgis.

'LOVE LETTER' CROWDS THE TREMONT

John Charles Thomas in the Leading Role of Delightful Musical Play

The final love letter young Philip Delmar wrote to pretty Miriam Charlot was quite the usual thing. The musical play William Le Baron and Victor Jacobi have made out of it is unusual. It is offered at the Tremont Theatre by Charles Dillingham, with John Charles Thomas as the most important player. You will make no mistake if you open your date book now and give it a night or two.

Miriam Charlot's mother, anxious that her daughter should marry well, sends young Mr. Delmar about his business. He goes, leaving the letter.

The love letter says he is "coming back." He will come back as (1) a great soldier, (2) a celebrated diplomat, (3) a great artist or (4) a servant, but whenever and however he returns, he will come back loving Miriam more than man ever loved maid before. Since, etc., etc.

When the young man does return Miss Miriam has become engaged to one Eugene Bernard. Mere mamma's doing. The girl does not love him.

The first of the three acts of "The Love Letter" gives neither hint nor promise of the wonderful scenes, beautiful costumes and droll comedy which is to follow. Miriam and Bernard are to go to the Countess Irma's party. The young woman falls asleep and "dreams" the party, with Philip Delmar there (1) as a great soldier, (2) as the famous diplomat, (3) as the celebrated artist and (4) as one of the servants. Four proposals at one party!

The piece gives Mr. Thomas four or five splendid songs—you know how he sings them—and many costumes, as indicated. Charles Judels is the Empress Bernard and, in the "dream" ball scene, a very funny one. Carolyn Thomson is the pretty and sweet-voiced Miriam; Marjorie Gateson a charming Countess Irma. The song hits are Mr. Thomas' "There Is a Girl," "Vanderbilt" and "My Heart Beats for You"; "Scandal Town," by Miss Gateson and Mr. Judels, and "Upside Down" by the Astaires.

Two shows in one, this Tremont offering, the second being the acrobatic dancing of the Astaires.

The first-night audience jammed the Tremont to the walls. If everybody goes out today to tell what he thinks of "The Love Letter," John Charles Thomas, Charles Judels and Fred and Adele Astaire, Mr. Dillingham can save a barrel of money on his advertising. See "The Love Letter," and forget your troubles.

LIVELY MUSICAL SHOW AT THE COLONIAL
One of the most ample and replete of musical comedies, "Two Little Girls in Blue," opened a two weeks' return engagement at the Colonial Theatre this evening with a thoroughly satisfying performance.
A great ocean liner is shown on the stage, first as it pulls away from the pier in New York, then in midocean, and finally docking at an Indian port. This original setting assisted Fred Jackson, the librettist, and a competent company, in "putting across" some very pleasing effects, which from time to time won sustained applause.
This musical comedy offers a magnificent opportunity for the brilliant work in particular of the fascinating Fairbanks twins, who were seen again yesterday.
The Tennyson twins helped to make it a sort of foursome with fun and jollity the keynote through all. Nothing more effervescently sparkling has been offered in this particular line in many moons.

BIG BOND SALES MADE TO HELP JOBLESS

$60,000,000 in City Securities Recently Disposed of in 13 States

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Recent sales of municipal bonds in 13 States have totalled over $60,000,000 and in addition $34,000,000 of the securities have been offered for sale, according to statistics made public today by the National Employment Conference. In addition $10,000,000 in State bonds have been sold and a like number offered for sale.

These figures, it was explained, in a statement, were compiled in connection with studies made of the possibility of hastening public works as a measure of relieving the unemployment situation.

"Public works, which it is hoped will be erected or extended by these municipal bonds," said the statement, "include highways, schools, sewers, filtration plants, water works, hospitals, parks, forest preserves, bridges, lights, paving, court houses, fire department and police department equipment, streets and sidewalks, Beach improvements and memorial playgrounds.

"The totals of municipal and township bonds recently sold or offered for sale include: Connecticut, sold $2,948,948—offered, $1,703,000; New Hampshire, $345,000—$230,000; Rhode Island $200,000—$200,000; New York, $3,667,870—$3,024,626; Massachusetts $3,881,500—$1,058,000.

O'CONNOR RAPS 'MUD SLINGING' CAMPAIGNS

Denounces Candidates Who Are Injuring the Name of Boston

Denouncing Mayoralty candidates who make their campaign by "slinging mud on the name of Boston," and asserting that he had never allowed his efforts in the campaign to interfere with the performance of his duties as School Committeeman, Charles S. O'Connor carried his fight in the Mayoralty contest into Roxbury and South Boston.

O'Connor made his addresses in the homes of Helen Buckley of No. 7 Glenarm street, Roxbury, and Ruth Quigley of No. 737 Third street, South Boston. He insisted that, despite his campaign, he is devoting full time to his school duties.

"My office as School Committeeman is a public trust and comes first in line of duty. Although I have laid aside an extensive practice of law to devote my time to my campaign for Mayor of Boston, I have never neglected my duties as a public official. I have attended all meetings of the School Committee and intend to be present at every one regardless of my campaign plans.

"Those who wish to see me regarding school matters, parents or teachers, will find that at all times I will give them preference over anyone concerned in my candidacy for Mayor.

"As a member of the School Committee I have kept every promise I made on the stump. As Mayor of Boston I will keep every promise I make on the stump."

—Fresh From Paris—
Latest Word From Marie Suzanne

Paris, France.

POIRET has designed a coat and a coat-wrap expressing with characteristic harmony his conception of the Winter mode. At the left, a front and a back panel of midnight blue velvet combine with wide sleeves and side sections of softly colorful Oriental brocade to make the bodice of a wide-skirted velvet coat. Large metal and enamel buttons are posed at each side of the front and back panels of the bodice, at the waistline; and the exceedingly smart muffling collar and the cuffs are of goatskin.

THE cape-wrap of bisque duvetyn sketched at the right is designed along the full, graceful lines followed rather consistently in the smartest Winter models. The coat-skirt is joined with decided fulness at the low waistline, while the bodice, sleeves and cape back are cut in one. There is a tall collar and front panel reaching to the waistline, of the kolinsky, and all of the sleeve which is not part of the cape is also of the kolinsky.

BAXTER OPENS HIS CAMPAIGN HEADQUARTERS

Leases Entire Floor of Downtown Office Building for Mayoralty Contest

Formal opening of mayoralty campaign headquarters for Charles S. Baxter will take place today, the entire floor of a downtown office building having been leased for the purpose.

With the coming of his headquarters, Baxter expects to begin an intensive drive in the mayoralty contest, declaring that he will base his fight on promises of what he will do if he is elected and not on attacks on the record of the other candidates.

Pledges of support are being offered daily from Democrats and Republicans all over the city, Baxter stated, adding that many Democrats have informed him they voted as Republicans last year and intend to do so again this year.

"Letters which I have received from hundreds of Democrats convince me," said Baxter, "that there are hundreds of the citizens of Boston who are Democrats in State and national politics, who are tired of Democratic mismanagement in the mayor's office in Boston.

"As I have stated before I am a Republican in State and national politics, but in city politics I am, as all my candidates should be if they had the best interests of Boston at heart, strictly non-partisan.

"I expect to receive the votes of hundreds of Democrats in every ward in the city who want a mayor who will be non-partisan and who is not in this campaign with some personal axe to grind."

Episcopal Church Has Property in State Worth 16 Million

The Episcopal Church in the diocese of Massachusetts has property, including endowments, in this State, amounting to $16,000,000, according to the annual report just published.

There has been a decrease of 483 in the number of communicants for the past fiscal year. The present number of ministers is 249, not including fourteen who are licensed to officiate in this diocese.

BOSTON TO TAKE PART IN BRIDGE TOURNAMENT

One of the most notable auction bridge tournaments in the history of the country is being planned by the Whist Club of New York in the interest of the American Committee for Devastated France. It will be played in cities in forty-six States between November 13 and December 10.

Boston bridge players will play on the afternoon of November 28 at the Copley Plaza, the Somerset, the Vendome and th Lenox hotels. Play will start at 3 o'clock in all th above named hotels.

The unique feature of the coming tournament is that the cards will be dealt in such a way as will give hands of equal value to every player, and results of play will be determined by skill, not luck. Winning scores at each table are to be sent to New York to be passed upon by a committee of the Whist Club.

Tickets for tables in Boston are on sale at Herricks and are reported to be going rapidly. The New England committee consists of: Mrs Robert W. Lovett, chairman, Mrs. Curtis Guild, Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons, Mrs. F. S. Whitwell and Mr. and Mrs. Horace Binney.

FAIL TO SELECT SUCCESSOR TO HARA

Elder Statesmen Continue Conferences; Services for Slain Premier

Tokio, Nov. 8.—(By the Associated Press)—Conferences of the elder statesmen continue in an effort to arrive at an agreement upon a successor to Premier Hara, who was assassinated Friday night. Marquis Saionji, Marquis Matsukata, Baron Makino and Admiral Saito, Governor General of Korea, have discussed the situation at some length at the palace.

The funeral of M. Hara yesterday was held at his residence and was attended only by personal friends. After the services, conducted by a Buddist priest, the funeral cortege proceeded to the headquarters of the Seiyukai Party, of which the late Premier was the head, where the body was viewed by thousands. Later it was removed on a special train to Morioka, where the final ceremony will be held Friday.

The assassin, Ryichi Nakata, has confessed that he planned the crime several months ago, and that he trailed the Premier since that time seeking a favorable opportunity to stab him.

There is much speculation concerning the possible successor to M. Hara. Marquis Saionji is most prominently mentioned, but in some quarters it is stated that he is unwilling to take over the duties himself, preferring merely to have a hand in the appointment.

FREE At Your Druggist's THIS WEEK

Your druggist will give you a 15-cent trial bottle of Palmolive Shampoo.

Accept it for your own sake and watch how your hair improves.

We Blended Palm and Olive Oils

To beautify your hair

This free 15-cent trial bottle contains ample quantity for one luxurious shampoo, no matter how heavy your hair. Use it and watch results.

See how soft it makes your hair, and how fluffy. Admire the attractive, well-groomed gloss.

Notice how clean it leaves your scalp, how all scurf and dandruff are completely removed. Ordinary shampooing doesn't get these results. They are due to palm and olive oils.

Softening cleansers

Olive oil possesses softening qualities which neutralize the drying effects of washing. Palm oil contributes body, richness and lasting qualities.

In combination they produce a thick, mild, profuse, penetrating lather which softens the scalp and reaches every root and hair cell.

This lather loosens the dandruff scales, dislodges and dissolves them, leaving the scalp and hair free to function healthfully.

Prevents Baldness

This thorough removal of dandruff, which doctors call seborrhea, is most necessary, as even the accumulation on healthy scalps injures the hair.

The dry, oily scales clog the roots of the hair, preventing proper nutrition. Soon the hair begins to fall out. Ordinary washing has little effect, often seeming to make the condition worse.

The blend of palm and olive oils you get in Palmolive softens and penetrates the scales, loosening the cap-like accumulation.

Gentle massage forces it into the tissues of the scalp, leaving it healthfully purged and clean.

Silky texture and satiny gloss

Such scientific shampooing is the basis of beauty, for it keeps both hair and scalp in perfect health.

It stimulates circulation, which carries proper nourishment to your hair. It regulates the minute oil glands which give your hair gloss and luster. Hair shampooed with Palmolive is neither brittle nor oily, but soft, glossy and silky.

Present the coupon at once and prove that these statements are true. One shampoo with the blend of palm and olive oils begins the transformation.

DOCTOR TO SUE FOR SLANDER IN HOSPITAL ROW

Brookline Institution Head Alleges Charges of Mrs Howe of Corey Hill Are False

Dr. Joseph Barone, physician in charge of the Brookline Hospital, has announced through his attorney, William A. Patch, that he will shortly bring suit for $25,000 against Mrs. Horace T. Howe of No. 149 Summit avenue, Brookline, for slander in connection with her charges against a group of Corey Hill hospitals.

Mrs. Howe had claimed that conditions in three institutions, of which the Brookline Hospital was one, were "intolerable" and had been the cause of a number of petitions demanding an investigation of the hospitals.

GROUNDLESS CHARGES.

Published to a reporter for the Boston American that the charges as far as the Brookline Hospital is concerned are entirely groundless and that Mrs. Howe will be given ample opportunity to prove her assertions to be so.

"Our hospital is one of the best and most scientifically conducted in the city," he asserted. "We have no insane patients there and never did have any. We do not conduct operations before open windows so that the afflicted can be seen by the curious public, although Mrs. Howe charges, and we are not guilty of practices that can in any way offend the neighbors."

MRS. HOWE'S CHARGES.

Among the charges which Mrs. Howe had made against the hospitals were that insane patients were allowed to roam unguarded over the grounds; a menace to passersby; that patients in the institutions were heard screaming and crying at all hours; that various forms of misconduct among the nurses prevailed, and that the hospitals constituted a public nuisance.

Dr. Barone offered to conduct a party of newspaper men through the institution at any time, declaring that they would be permitted to go to any part of the hospital they desired in their investigation.

BOARD HAS NO POWER.

The formal charges against the hospitals, submitted to the Brookline Board of Health by residents in the vicinity of the [illegible] hospitals have been considered by that body which has issued a report [illegible] the hospitals and intimating that it can find nothing to substantiate the allegations.

After pointing out that the Board has no power under the law to proceed against private hospitals, which are not licensed by it, the report which was drafted by Dr. Ira Philip B. Parker and Ernest H. [illegible] continues:

"It is clear that the mere existence of private hospitals does not constitute a public nuisance. Many institutions are lawful and necessary. The nine incidents cited in the petition, while if true, create public disorder, and in some cases [illegible] nuisance, would not in any way prove the hospital a public nuisance.

"Criminal acts should be reported at once to the police department. Violations of public health rules of course be stopped by prompt action. The allegations here of a few isolated instances. It is not stated in what hospitals they occur.

EXONERATES SECRETARY.

"There is no suggestion that any of the acts are continued with the exception of the sixth, 'children born in a room with the whites up.' An investigation shows that is not the case at the present time."

The report adds that "the fall in real estate values is nothing the Board of Health can prevent."

It then takes up the charge that the city has sent patients to the Pilgrim Hospital, which is [illegible] retary of the Overseers of the Poor and the Board of Health is owned and says,

"It does not seem that the town should be deprived of the convenience and benefit received because an employe of the town is interested. The sending of the cases has resulted in little financial benefit to the hospital and in great saving to the town."

YALE AND TIGER TUSSLE AT NEW HAVEN BOWL BIG GAME OF WEEK

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Although the Navy-Penn State game is the only Eastern football contest of the week, in which undefeated teams are to be the opponents, the Yale-Princeton battle at New Haven is likely to outrank the former game in general interest.

The game will be the forty-fifth meeting of the gridiron representatives of the Connecticut and New Jersey institutions—the one annual that dates from beginning, forty-seven years ago, has gone uninterrupted except for the two years this country was engaged in the world war.

The Harvard-Yale series, and the Princeton-Harvard series had their beginnings at the same time, but Harvard-Yale relations were broken in 1894 and 1894 and the Princeton-Harvard relations in football were discontinued for many years prior to their resumption in 1911.

* * *

The victories in the Yale-Princeton annual are very much on Yale's side of the column for of the forty-four games played the Elis have returned winners in twenty-five games, the Tigers in but twelve, while seven of the games have resulted in tie scores and only twice in the long series have the Tigers been able to score two victories in sequence.

* * *

In 1886 Princeton won, 6 to 0, and in 1885, when Johnny Poe kicked the drop-kick goal with his nose, the Tigers were the victors, 11 to 10, while the Tigers' 13 to 6, and 20 to 0 wins in 1919 and 1920, formed the second pair of consecutive victories achieved by Princeton teams.

Yale's longest string of consecutive victories was the five the Tigers came in the years 1907-8-9-10, when the Elis won four straight games. As Yale had tied Princeton in 1906, and had won the 1904-5 battles, Princeton suffered seven very lean years, insofar as its football relations with Yale were concerned. Sequential victories of two and three games for Yale are sprinkled throughout the records of the teams, and the comparative totals of points since the adoption of the present scoring system give Yale 365 and Princeton but 164.

* * *

Princeton, this year, is ambitious to make it three wins in a row over the Elis, while Yale hopes to start a new and much longer series of consecutive victories over the Tigers. Almost students of football there is considerable debate as to which of the two is more apt to realize its ambition.

* * *

Against Princeton, on Saturday, Yale will start a virtually untried team, but one rich in possibilities, while the Tigers will be represented by a veteran array, familiar with the sting of defeat, but gaining courage and confidence through its recent triumph over Harvard.

* * *

Many are favoring the Navy's chances of victory in its game with Penn State at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, and for the reason that the Navy, in addition to possessing a strong attack, boasts and equally strong defense, whereas Penn state's strength to date has been entirely that of offense.

* * *

Harvard scored three touchdowns on the strength of Georgia Tech's achieved one such score, and other teams have crossed the Penn State goal line after penetrating the Easterners' defense, and it has been solely through its attacking strength that Penn State has been able to achieve its record for the season.

* * *

The Navy boasts a much superior defensive record, the feature of which came three weeks ago, when the Middies not only prevented Princeton from scoring, but held the Tigers from making a single first down. The Navy, however, has yet to realize fully on the attack, its eleven made telling advances in every game, but poor selection of plays has prevented the team from rolling up the scores many believe it capable of.

* * *

"What has Jack Cannell been doing since the Cornell game?" is a query one hears when the annual Pennsylvania-Pennsylvania contest approaches.

* * *

Reports from Hanover have been lacking in the information many have sought, and the general conclusion is that the Dartmouth coach has been spending a busy ten days re-organizing and perhaps rearranging his team, and that many innovations may develop in Dartmouth's attack and defense as next Saturday's Polo Grounds contest is played.

* * *

For several years now the Dartmouth-Pennsylvania annual has developed most spectacular play. The Red and Blue team on several of these occasions has played way beyond any early season form it has shown, and the fast Penn attack has bowled the Pittsburgh and Lafayette to but considered as assurance that it will take the "panic" to force Dartmouth to its merriest pace.

* * *

Seven Eastern teams remain in the section. They are Lafayette, Annapolis, Yale, Cornell, Washington and Jefferson, Georgetown and Penn State—the last named team, through its tie with Harvard, being the only one of the seven which has not won all its games.

* * *

With the exceptions of Cornell and Lafayette these victorious elevens engage strong opponents on Saturday, and one or more seem destined to tumble from their high station. Unless the game results in a tie the Navy-Penn State battle is certain to result in the elimination of one of their number. In the Pitt-W. & J. contest the "Presidents" are far from certain of victory; in the Georgia Tech-Georgetown game the latter team faces a tough opponent, and Yale, playing Princeton, meets the first real test encountered by the Blue.

* * *

Now is Cornell a sure-thing winner over Springfield. The latter team, with its forward passing game and defense, may be a big upset. Last year it sent the powerful Detroit team to defeat, and although such a happening is unlikely Springfield cannot be counted out until the final whistle sounds, or Cornell has rolled up a total of points too great for the "T" college's execution.

* * *

Dartmouth and Columbia showed that Cornell can be scored upon, and that a team which can hold the highly powerful Navy making a record against the Dobie machine. Unfortunately for Columbia and Dartmouth neither evidenced an ability to hold the ball but once it their possession.

* * *

Those who have hailed Don Lourie as a great field general were given opportunities to reconsider one or two occasions in the Harvard contest.

* * *

The first came early in the contest, when with the ball in Harvard territory on a first down, Lourie chose to take a chance with a long forward pass, which, if it failed, as was the case, meant a touchback and the surrendering of the ball to Harvard on the twenty-yard line. This play was called, mind you, when Princeton had four downs to make ten yards, and when a short gain would have been employed without chance of registering a touchback.

* * *

The second instance of questionable generalship came when Princeton gained the first down on Harvard's five yard line. There Lourie ran four successive plays through the center of the four on the right side of the Harvard defensive line, and all four from a close formation that carried the threat of a forward pass or an off-tackle or around-end play. This enabled the Harvard team to charge with the ball and halt the plays for very limited gains and ultimately gain the ball on downs. By assuming other formations which would worry the Crimson, such plays might have met with success, but Lourie neglected to do so.

New York, Nov. 3.—Mayoralty candidates failed to share the spotlight with Knute Rockne's dashing Notre Dame football team here today. This was election day in the metropolis and as the Gothamites like to mix football with their votes, the battle at the Polo Grounds between the Hoosiers and Foster Sanford's scarlet eleven from Rutgers promised to draw a big throng.

Rockne's team, fresh from a decisive victory over the Army last Saturday, was into today's game favored to give Rutgers a football lesson.

The Rutgers players, none too polished this year, are a husky lot. They were idle last week and they went into today's contest with full steam up.

The teams offered another chance for sectional comparisons, for Rutgers was beaten by Georgia Tech and it will be interesting to see whether or not the Hoosiers can top Tech's score of 48 to 14 against the scarlet.

ONLY MODERATE WORK HEREAFTER FOR CORNELL

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 3.—The Cornell football squad opened the week's practise with a light workout, on account largely of a signal drill and practise in passing. Except for Leonard Hanson, the left tackle who was used up in the Columbia game, all of the regulars took part in the practise.

Coach Dobie announced a moderate program for the week, indicating that the three scrimmages a week schedule was a thing of the past. His principal effort now will be directed toward keeping the 160 players in the physical and mental condition they reached in the Dartmouth and Columbia games and to avert a reaction before the Pennsylvania game.

Sundstrom played left tackle in Hanson's absence, and because of the late arrival of some of the regulars from the Columbia game, and several other second stringers got into the line-up. Hanson, Coach Dobie thinks, will be in shape to play in a day or two.

SCALPERS GET ROUGH RECEPTION AT BROWN

Providence, Nov. 3.—Ticket scalpers received a rough reception at Brown University when 4,000 seats for the Brown-Harvard game at Columbia, Saturday, were placed on sale at the Lyman Gymnasium.

Those who were discovered by Dr. Fred W. Marvel, supervisor of athletics, after they had succeeded in purchasing blocks of seats, were detained and their tickets taken away. Of the lot allotted to Brown 5,000 were sold before 9 o'clock.

Says Some People Hate to Blink for Fear Something Will Happen While Their Eyes Are Closed and They Won't See It

There is a species of bird here in town called the night hawk. He's afraid to go to bed for fear he'll miss something.

He knows all the night watchmen, and calls the milk man by his first name.

He has a bed somewhere but he forgot where he left it.

He had a home but he threw the key away when he was twenty-one.

He thinks people only go to bed when they're sick.

He hangs around the different clubs till they close and then sails all day for them to open again.

ARNOLD HORWEEN JOINS HARVARD COACHES

Harvard is back in the Stadium this afternoon after the short layoff due to the hard game with Princeton Saturday. Coach Fisher thought the team deserved a day's rest after its tough battle, but gave orders that not a player miss today's engagement.

There seems to be only three injuries of importance, although it may gradually leak out that more players were mussed up Saturday.

Jack Crocker is nursing a bad right ankle. Yesterday he favored the injury, which is really an old one, by carrying a cane. The chances are that the right end will be in shape for the Yale game. There isn't a chance of playing him Saturday, even if the Crimson selects were considering using their first string men against Brown.

Charley Tierney has a bad shoulder and accidentally decorated face. Rocco Fiske has his chronic bad knee to worry about, while George Owen, Fiske Brown, Ekis Clark and Clark Macomber are complaining of considerable painful bruises.

Arnold Horween is back in the Stadium for the remainder of the season. He captained the 1920 team, and if he can coach half as well as he played Harvard has a valuable man. Horween got down to business yesterday and, playing for the second freshman team, continually smeared plays started by the first yearling eleven.

The second team reported yesterday and got a pocketful of Brown plays to practise. They meet the Brown second team Friday afternoon. Before that time, however, the scrubs will put the formations into action against the men who are to face the Bruins Saturday.

Coach Fisher and his associates meet plan out this week the makeup of the team which will face Yale. If they believe more weight is needed in the rush line, Tierney will be shifted from right tackle to centre, and Grew will replace Hubbard at left guard. That would make a difference of almost fifty pounds in the rush line.

Tierney is a fighter, but Coach Trumbull may decide to put him on shifting him. Hubbard may be shifted to tackle, and this would allow Grew to be unopposed for guard.

Owen and Fiske will be in whatever lineup Harvard starts against Yale providing they are in shape. The game will be open with W. Churchill Chapin, Jenkins, Gehrke and Mitch Cratwick considered. Buell is sure to be quarterback.

NO EXCUSES OFFERED BY ARMY FOR DEFEAT

West Point, Nov. 3.—There was little comfort to be had in the result of the Notre Dame game Saturday for the Army's supporters. However, no excuses are being made for the cadets' poor showing and the coaches will continue their drive from now on with the Navy battle first in mind.

Villanova comes here next Saturday, but the Army's eye now is on the final development of the team for its big game finale at the Polo Grounds on November 10 and the contest this week and is not worrying anybody in the Army camp.

The squad came through the Hoosier game in fair shape. Today the men rested, except for a skull practise in the gymnasium. Tours the members went over the details of the play last Saturday and its mistakes. A punch must be developed somewhere and all efforts will be bent in that direction.

YEAST SOON BANISHES UGLY SKIN BLEMISHES

When Taken With Iron in Convenient Tablet Form.

Everyone is now familiar with the fact that yeast is wonderful for the skin in treating such skin troubles as pimples, boils, blackheads, etc.

But there were thousands of people who couldn't eat yeast in cake form, owing to its disagreeable taste. So it was decided by certain scientists to find a way in which yeast could be taken in pleasant and convenient tablet form. The result of their researches is Ironized Yeast, which is now the popular vitamine tonic treatment.

Ironized Yeast is now the tablet Ironized Yeast and the results reported are almost unbelievable. Not only is Ironized Yeast fine for clearing up the complexion, it brings equally remarkable results in treating thinness, low vitality, nervousness, weakness, poor appetite and other symptoms of poor health. Even after the first few days people may they notice decidedly beneficial effects from Ironized Yeast.

This is because Ironized Yeast is rich in vitamines, which have been found absolutely essential to good health. Doctors now know that even the best foods of these all-important elements, and as a result we become run-down, sickly, nervous and thin.

Ironized Yeast contains highly concentrated brewer's yeast, which is far richer in vitamines than baking yeast, and in addition contains organic or vegetable iron, the great blood-builder, so if you are run-down, or if you suffer with humiliating skin blemishes, resort to yourself to try Ironized Yeast. Ironized Yeast is pleasant to take, keeps indefinitely, and costs about the same to use as common yeast but is much more effective. Each package contains 7 days' treatment and costs only a dollar, or just 15c a day. Special directions for children in each package. Sold at good druggists everywhere. Made by the Ironized Yeast Company, Atlanta, Ga.

GEORGETOWN IS THE OBJECTIVE WITH B. C.

Coach Cavanaugh Will Direct Practice and Training for That Game

Coach Cavanaugh's usual Monday talk was given yesterday to the Boston College football squad on the field, instead of in the locker room, and was followed by a two-hour practice session. The program for the next two weeks will embrace practice sessions as stiff as the squad has experienced since the start of the season, although the team has not and will not have any opponent booked for Saturday.

The reason why the Maroon and Gold squad will enjoy no more holidays may be learned from a perusal of the scores Georgetown piled up against Holy Cross and Fordham. It will be remembered that Holy Cross was held by only three points in the game with Harvard. Georgetown trampled on Holy Cross with size 38 score while the Fordham team could score but one touchdown.

Last Saturday Georgetown ran up 28 points against Fordham's 7. If comparisons mean anything, Boston College will have to hold Fordham to a scoreless tie. In neither game did Georgetown exert its full strength. Cavanaugh's men will have to face a team that has not yet been defeated when the Senators arrive here on the 19th, and a team that feels confident it can even up old scores with the Maroon and Gold eleven.

Coach Cavanaugh does not let comparisons of Georgetown's record with that of Boston College worry him. A victory over Georgetown is his objective, and his men will be trained to accomplish this objective. The B. C. team has twice upset the "dope" by holding the Fordham team and by "spoiling" Centre Marietta. The B. C. eleven will be in the best form of the season when it clashes with Georgetown, having two weeks to prepare for the contest.

For the first time since he was injured, Jim Doyle, Kelly's mate at left guard, took his place in the line yesterday. Cavanaugh has been saving Doyle for the big game and his presence in the line will strengthen it greatly. Captain Elmer Ellery, who has filled Doyle's shoes very creditably all season, will probably get into the fray in the game at some period of the games.

In today's practice, the first team went through a few plays while the subs looked on. Later on in the week the subs will be sent against the first team to try and break up the first team attack.

The regular backfield men had a day off. Quarterback Donnellan alone of the quartette doing any real work at the Boston College field, while Brosnan and Dowd filled in for Mattville and Ellery will be able to get into that bout.

It will not be surprising to see Wilson and Dowd in action against Georgetown on Polo Grounds, which, of course, will p ay unless he is minus a leg. But should Liston be replaced by either of the games, Dowd seems to have the right stuff for the post.

Wilson is not so good as a line plunger, but is speedy in gaining off end runs.

BIG SLASH IN KENTUCKY RACING PURSES IN 1922

Louisville, Ky., Nov 3. The Kentucky racing season of 1923, now a matter of history, is understood to have been disappointing not only to the horsemen but to the management of the several tracks as well. Business depression was reflected in the growing slump in the gate receipts and in fact as a decrease in the volume of money wagered in the pari-mutuels at some of the tracks.

The thoroughbreds in the race track owners exclusively but there are many who profess to believe that a substantial reduction in the value of purses will be made next year.

MAHMOUT WILL WRESTLE LINOW THURSDAY NIGHT

Mahmout, the "Balkan Lion," will meet Ivan Linow at the Grand Opera House Thursday night. Mahmout is reported in excellent shape despite rumors that he had been killed in action or badly wounded.

Mahmout says he will win from Linow in straight falls in spite of the extra weight and aggressiveness of Linow. Mahmout will scale about 205 pounds to 230 for Linow, who is always in shape.

COMMERCE HIGH TRAINS HARD FOR BATTLE AGAINST BROOKLYN

By FRED C. LANE.

Commerce High has been going great guns since its victory over Latin and Providence Tech, and will no doubt make things interesting for Brooklyn Commercial High on Saturday. Little is known of the invaders, but Coach Sherlock is leaving no stone unturned to make his team a winner.

The Newton-Malden game will be played at the Malden Athletic Field. Coach McDonald is taking advantage of the home grounds in preference to staging the game on strange territory.

* * *

From a financial standpoint the contest, if played at one of the Boston baseball parks would be a success undoubtedly, but in order to eliminate the extra expense involved in paying for the field, the game will take place, as per schedule, on the Malden gridiron.

* * *

Too much to at stake to risk playing on any other field than where it is scheduled, according to Coach McDonald, who is looking forward to the day when the bunting will be unfurled at the banquet to the victorious team.

* * *

Spectators at the Brookline-Everett game were astonished at the fine manner that Joe Williams newly appointed quarterback ran off his plays. The old saying, "Every cloud has a silver lining," was never truer than in the case of this newly-uncovered youngster. Not only was his generalship in running the team up to college style, but his carrying of the pigskin was instrumental in many of Brookline's big gains.

* * *

Joe Tansey, halfback of Marblehead High, who has been so closely covered by North Shore ends this season, had one of his biggest days on Saturday and was the means of toppling Beverly from the pinnacle that it has stood on all season. Early found it impossible to off-stave his rushes, both off the tackles and skirting the ends. Working in conjunction with Tansey were Manni Gillis and Hunson. The interference given by Tansey was the best seen this league this season.

* * *

Marblehead team has a post-season game with Salem December 8, at Salem. The proceeds will help defray the expenses of sending the team to Maywood, Ill., next year, for the return game with that eleven.

* * *

Gloucester High is without a game for Thanksgiving Day and would like to arrange a contest with some H. S. Communications should be sent to Faculty-manager Dunn

* * *

This week's football clashes are the most important games of the season. St. Marks and Groton tomorrow and their annual meeting will attract many of the alumni. The annual Andover-Exeter game is the cause for much discussion by followers of sport.

* * *

Andover will enter the fray a favorite, but it is well to remember that Andover was the underdog last year and won 6 to 3. Exeter, regardless of the setback given it by Tabor Academy later fell before Andover, will fight for this contest like no other. At present the team is severely handicapped because of injuries, but Coach Burks hopes to have the men in shape for this annual tussle.

BLAIR, EDDY AND CUTLER OUT OF TIGER GAME

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 3.—Yale's eleven was selected for the Princeton game, as far as the coaches can predict a lineup Saturday. The team was announced into scrimmage in the Yale Bowl for the last exacting actual football before the bout with the Jungaleers.

The selection was as follows:

| Left end | Hall |
|---|---|
| Left tackle | Bell |
| Left guard | Cruikshanks |
| Centre | Landis |
| Right guard | Guernsey |
| Right tackle | Dillon |
| Right end | Dewey |
| Quarterback | Becket |
| Left halfback | Captain Alderich |
| Right halfback | Mallory |
| Fullback | Jones |

* * *

It is a keen disappointment for the coaches that have Ted Blair, Ed Cutler and Mike Eddy, for the Princeton game, but none of these three will start and they will be able to get into that bout.

But in addition, Charlie O'Hearn, of Brookline, Harry Cross, of Providence, and Morris and "Deacon" Quaile, another crip of potential regulars, will be able to line up against the Tigers in their best form, although all of them will probably be drafted for short term duty only.

They are capable of perhaps between ten and fifteen minutes' play each, and Head Coach Tad Jones will probably call them from the sidelines, when a scoring emergency exists into which they can be plunged. The final injuries to O'Hearn and Blair were heart-breakers.

With the exception that Tony Hulman, the former Worcester Academy star, will probably start, the eleven which has been finally selected is the same as that which has worked together the past few weeks. Its game is highly developed, and the coaches favor sending to the kicking eleven which is perfectly conditioned and which has worked together in dress rehearsal for same rather than a team composed of poorly conditioned spectacular stars.

* * *

Orders for yesterday's scrimmaging included the only strenuous and long continued drill of the week for the players who will meet Princeton.

Last Night Fights.

At New York, Leach Cross, the veteran lightweight, won a judge's decision over Frankie Maxwell in twelve rounds.

RUTH HITS FOR 1000 IN ROLE OF ACTOR

By NICK FLATLEY

"Speaking of contracts," said Babe, King of Swat;
"Maybap I'm an actor or may be, I'm not.
But never a Rothern, nor Hitchcock, nor Booth
Signed up for more money—and that's the cold truth."
—Babe Ruth in "The Cleanup."

Battering Babe Ruth, who hits more home runs annually than most leagues do, has registered in another entirely new role—he has added histrionics to the sock, slide, and stage circles and is now a candidate on the big league vaudeville time.

He's playing double-headers right at the gate of the well known cash customer all the time and doing it just as consistently as he busts baseballs over various and sundry ball yard parapets.

• • •

The Babe is just as nervous as a steam roller. He strolls as casually onto the boards as he does to the plate. He carries calmly while the first big cheer rolls around, and then proceeds to go through his lines, without any of the hesitancy or nervousness that make the theatrical efforts of most athletic stars of very brief duration.

• • •

The Bambino puts a few wise cracks; sings a song, a duet or two; some of the actors mug—but just as easily as if he had been educated in the one night stands, rather than on the baseball diamonds around Baltimore.

• • •

We might remark that he will hardly supplant Willie Collier, or Eddie Foy, or Al Jolson as a great comedian, but we must add that he goes through with his stuff with much more ease than did Rabbi Arranville or Hank Gowdy, or Dick Kelly, or any of the World Series stars in their brief fit before the footlights.

• • •

The huge Mr. Ruth wasn't any stage fright at all and seemingly admired the nerve there because the money is, in his curious mind, the thing that requires the ability of a Barrymore. The Babe is interested and enthusiastic about his Yankee uniform. He also knows how he swings the bat, then does the warble.

• • •

His song is entitled "Little By Little" and he hangs to the key, although admitting that an attack of laryngitis has rather wrecked his upper register. He can't hit the high ones as they say in baseball, but he takes his owning.

• • •

Following which, Wellington Cross, the side kick, goes into the audience and plucks various articles from the bleacherites, the hilarity of the latter recognizing the same after the act by time has been repeated a couple of times. Not an original gag, but new for an athlete, and as effective as anything could be in the effort to make a star out of a novice.

• • •

Ruth has a nineteen weeks' contract, at a huge figure, and is accordingly reconciled to the shackles of the barnstorming life. He has learned the value of silence and refers only to the Lambs incident in remarking that if the Judge excuses him, he will have to stick to the stage. When the judge sees the act, he will probably relent, for it's evident that the Rambino doesn't enjoy a very agonized applause half as much as he does the cheers of the baseball throng.

The left arm that ruined Ruth's usefulness in the recent series is still bandaged, though healing rapidly. His right hand is wrapped up, also, result of a bolt that parked there. Outside of that, he looks as big a house and healthy as a Thanksgiving turkey at this time.

Yale Uses Movies to Help Oarsmen Imprve Work

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 5.—The idea of "seeing ourselves as others see us" is the latest method for finding the flaws and learning correct stroking of the Yale crews.

Yesterday afternoon's crew practice was featured by Head Coach Cadegy having ultra slow motion pictures taken of the first and second shells in action, the first time Yale has taken advantage of the "movies" in any athletic training.

The films will be shown before a gathering of the crews and criticism made on the form displayed.

The annual Fall inter-class regatta will open this afternoon, the finals being contested on Thursday.

RUTGERS PREPARED TO MEET AERIAL ATTACKS

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 5.—Coach Sanford sent the Rutgers eleven through its final drill before the Notre Dame game. The squad of twenty-eight men will leave today for Boston, remain at the Vendome Hotel until time for the game.

Kahe will be the only regular absent from the lineup. He is laid up with injuries and his place at centre will be taken by John Nagle, a clever guard who has a lot of experience passing the ball. The guard will probably be Nat Sandler and Pratt with Isaac and Kingman playing tackles. Doolittle, Brahm and Leppacker are the choices for ends. The opening backfield will likely be composed mostly of Jr sophs. Maloney at quarterback is the only veteran. Waite will probably play fullback, with Chandler and Redmond halfbacks.

SHEVLIN KNOCKS OUT LOGAN IN FOURTH

Dartmouth Boxing Instructor Proves Easy Winner of One-Sided Bout

Eddie Shevlin, the Dartmouth College boxing instructor swung his unbeaten punch on Ray Logan here Tuesday night and had the latter in dreamers straw hat. Murphy, Baldwin, Yale and Oakland went down to defeat after White pushover.

There has not been a good New England lightweight since with the exception of Frankie (Young) Britt. The latter secured his career as a featherweight, but later branched forth as a lightweight. Britt fought Dundee, Jackson and most of the other good lightweights and made a creditable record. The New Bedford boy, however, is now passe as a star.

For a time it looked as though Charley Parker would develop into a headliner. Parker was poorly advised by well meaning friends. After the South End boy had secured a long list of knockouts his friends convinced him he could beat Dundee and Leiger. It was after what those two little fluent performers did to Parker. They wrecked any possible chance he might have had of gaining ring greatness.

Then came the interest in the welterweight division. This was largely due to Young Kirby's spectacular fighting following his experiences in France. Kirby was never a high grade performer, but he is game and aggressive. He usually fought hard even in defeat. Of course many of his bouts were of the setup variety, but Kirby was nevertheless responsible for creating a lot of interest in the game.

Jack Shea has resumed boxing during the war and has been quite active in the ring since. Paul Hurley, Battling Nate Siegel have all been showing up fairly well in the game.

Apparently the Armory A. A. realizes that the welterweights still have the call. It recently played to a $16,000 house when Shevlin fought Siegel. It now comes forth with the announcement that Shevlin will battle Mike Morley of Hartford, who claims the New England welterweight title, at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night. Morley has instilled new interest in the local boxing situation by his bangup ring work.

A Shevlin-Doyle bout is also being planned, which means that the welterweights will have the call for some time to come.

Charles J. Mooney has tendered his resignation as a Judge of the Boxing Commission. Mooney charges he has failed in receiving many assignments so he did not stand in." Mooney's letter of resignation follows:

"Messrs. Foote, Buckley and Harrell.

"Boxing Commissioners:

"Gentlemen:

"Having had but four assignments during the fourteen months I have been serving as a boxing judge, I have come to the conclusion that there isn't a particle of fairness in handing out the assignments. Some individuals work, week after week, while others get little or no recognition. I suppose that one has to 'stand in.'

"However, I have the satisfaction of knowing that no Severn reputation was spoiled by any decision given by me. Neither did I have to listen to a lot of hooting and hissing, such as some of your favorites receive.

"I have been told that the only way to get favored was to visit the commissioner, shake hands with Mr Buckley, tell him what a fine fellow he is, that he's the greatest man on earth, etc.

"Not being in the habit of lying, I couldn't do this.

"I can will therefore, please accept my resignation

"Yours truly,

"C. J. Mooney."

GRADWELL DEFEATS FRANKIE YOUNG BRITT

New Bedford, Nov. 5.—Billy Gradwell of Boston handed Frankie Young Britt, of this city, a fancy pasting in a ten-round bout at the Arena A. C. winning the decision.

Although Gradwell's margin at the end of the scrap was a very wide one, the judges disagreed and Referee Jimmy Walsh of Boston awarded the bout to the Boston boxer.

The decision was well received. Britt carried the first three rounds, rushing Gradwell to the ropes and scoring freely to the body and leaning his left jab on Gradwell's jaw almost at will.

Gradwell solved Britt's style and carried the fourth and fifth sessions. The sixth was even but from then on Britt was on the receiving end of everything in Gradwell's repertoire.

The latter opened a cut over Britt's eye in the last round.

In the eight round semi, final Tommy Jordan of this city won the decision over Jean Rousseau of Berlin. Jordan came strongly round. Rousseau weighed 134 and will be no minute opponent for any of the featherweights in the way of the

WELTERWEIGHTS GETTING THE BIG MONEY IN N. E.

By Jack Conway

The welterweight boxers continue to get the big money in New England ring circles despite business depression and the other after the war illnesses.

There once was a time when the lightweights were about the only ones who could demand big purses in this part of the country. For several years Eddie Mannion, Steve Baldwin, Jack Britton and Pete Mandell and Jim Dagan had things pretty nearly all their own way.

Then along came Charley White of Chicago and knocked out Mannion in a fast one round affair and forthwith became the

TEN KNOCKOUTS FEATURE B. A. A. AMATEUR BOUTS

The ringside seats furnished entertainment for the fans who attended the B. A. A. boxing tournament at the Arena. The snow brought out records for speed because many bouts ended abruptly. The program was featured with ten knockouts in the twelve bouts on the card.

Jack Flanagan of Hingham was the star performer although it was a close bout. His opponent, Fred Whittaker of Cambridge hit the canvas in the first round. It was the cleanest knockout in the finals of amateur boxing in this city. Sheen Brennan and Pat Donahue both defaulted.

Fred Austin of East Boston had things his own way in the finals of the 115-pound class decisively beating Frank Bonney of South Boston who in two previous bouts had K'd his man in the first round. Austin knew too much about the art of self defence and outpointed Bonney.

In the 125-pound class John Morello of East Boston battled his way to the top over a long list. His cleverboxing and ability to hit won him the decision over Charles Costello of East Boston in the final.

The judges disagreed after three rounds of furious boxing and the referee ordered another round. Morello, master of his staying power, had the

The Harvard Athletic Association has returned $10,000 to applicants for tickets for the Yale game, and is ready to mail another $15,000 if those who sought seats apply for the big classic duly say the word.

Harvard has been forced to notify 5,000 applicants who asked for two tickets, many of whom are undergraduates that each man can have only one ticket. Letters went forth today with a check for $5, and the promise of any other remittance from the applicants doesn't care to go to the game alone.

PRINCETON SQUAD BEGINS WORK FOR YALE GAME

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 5.—Princeton's football squad, naturally a bit bruised from the Harvard game Saturday, began preparations for Yale with a scrimmage, the first staged on a Monday all season.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. FORBES.

As the old lady remarked, it is easy to ask questions. A reader of this column asks such questions as these:

"Why is exchange?"

"Who decides every morning just how much the French franc or the Italian lire is going to be worth that day?"

"Isn't most of our present inability to export goods due to the state of the foreign exchanges?"

"With gold as a basis a universal form of currency backed by all the various governments would have the same exchange value everywhere, wouldn't it?"

"Couldn't each nation keep on withdrawing her present currency and issuing universal currency in its place until all nations had a currency acceptable everywhere?"

* * *

He adds, "Please do not say this is impossible. Ten years ago if anyone had said the United States would vote itself dry we would have said such a thing was utterly impossible. Most people think at present that disarmament is impossible, yet I am very sanguine that such a thing will eventually come to pass.

"Many of your readers, I am sure, would like you to discuss, in language they can understand, the matters and suggestions here raised."

* * *

A tall order.

I turned the letter over to an extremely able banking friend, an expert in foreign exchange, and here is the gist of his reply—I translate it into simpler language than he, natirally, uses:

"The inability of our factories to find markets for their products is partly due to exchange conditions. But I question if it is due to this half as much as widely imagined.

"The decrease in our exports of manufactured products is due, to some extent, to the lack of purchasing power of the whole world, and this lack of purchasing power is partly caused by the depreciation—that is weakened—currencies of Central Europe. We would certainly be in a better position to export if all currencies were on a gold basis. But whether the scheme suggested by this subscriber would plant us in such a position is, to my mind, doubtful.

"Before the war our exports of manufactured products to Central Europe were not very great, and even if exchange were on a sound, stable basis, the cost of labor in this country would be a serious handicap to active competition with European nations.

* * *

"Where is the gold to come from to establish the universal currency proposed? The European countries whose currencies have no gold value at all have not that have the least amount of gold. To establish a universal currency, it would have to be backed and guaranteed by all the nations. Would the United States be willing to go into such a pool and guarantee the currency obligations, of say, Czecho-Slovakia, etc.?

"Before any universal currency could be established, it would be absolutely essential that every European nation, in the first place, balance its budget by not spending more than its revenue, and, in the second place discontinue the printing of additional notes. Until this is done, no exchange basis can possibly be found.

* * *

"The fixing of exchange rates every morning can be explained very easily. It is done by the offers and bids for the various exchanges from all parts of the world. Each banking institution doing an exchange business is in daily communication with, for instance, London, Paris, Zurich, Berlin and Milan, as well as the other principal cities of the world, and is kept posted on the rates for foreign exchange prevailing in these various markets. In addition, the bank receives orders from foreign institutions as well as from its own customers and proceeds to quote the market here, based on those orders as well as its customers' requirements.

"For instance, if there were bills here for Italian exchange at a certain price a bank dealer is ready to cables that it could buy at a lower price abroad, it would, of course, fill the bids and proceed to 'cover' abroad.

* * *

"European exchanges are depreciated today because, firstly, the trade balances of the various countries are against them; secondly, they have borrowed considerable money in foreign countries on which the interest has to be remitted periodically; and, thirdly, the debt of the various European nations to the United States government is a factor in keeping exchange low."

* * *

Now, let me try to summarize it this way. Suppose you and I were boys, and we and some of our chums want to play a game of marbles. Tradition and customs have decided that we play with glass shooters. You and I, being better off than most of the other boys, have a plentiful supply of glass shooters, but the other fellows have been playing in hard luck and have lost all their glass shooters. They want very badly to play with us and we want very badly to play with them, but they have not the necessary glass shooters. They have learned how to make inferior grades of ordinary marbles, but nobody prizes these home-made inferior marbles, nor do we, because if we want to get into another game we know that only glass shooters will gain us admission.

* * *

The glass shooters used in the world business game are gold coins. Most of the European countries have lost their gold coins and are using home-made borrowed counterfeits, like the inferior marbles, won't gain them admission into the international trade game. Gold, like glass shooters, is the only thing to sell these three towns has been selected to consider the proposition.

* * *

No country can hope to have a currency of high international value so long as it keeps its printing presses running overtime in transforming paper into currency in unlimited amount. Nor can any country stop these printing presses until it makes ends meet by raising enough in taxes or loans to pay its bills.

* * *

It may help you to get a better grasp of this whole matter if you think of nations as individuals. Hard-up individuals have a tough time, so must hard-up nations. No fairy can wave a wand and transform stern, unpleasant realities into beautiful, ideal conditions.

SPILLANE HITS AT NATION'S HOTELS

Finds Bad Service and Itching for Tips in Big Proportion in Middle West

By RICHARD SPILLANE.

On the Road, Nov. 2.—This is the story of an unknown or, rather a portion of an onion.

Apple growers claim that—

The apple is not so strong as the onion, so there is warrant for the claim that—

"An onion a day keeps everybody away."

However that may be, a traveler who had accumulated a man-sized cold in his joutneyings over 5,000 or 6,000 miles of these United States and Canada, and who found the ordinary pharmaceutical compounds of no avail, determined to try the old and tried household remedy—an onion sandwich—for his cold.

A 15-POUND SANDWICH.

At dinner in a Middle West hotel he asked the waiter if he could get one to take to his room. The waiter said no, but it could be arranged to send one to the room.

"All right," said the man with the cold, "send an onion sandwich to Room 852."

In due time a servitor appeared heading aloft a huge tray with silver service enough for an ordinary meal. There was a silver platter, on which reposed some slices of onion, and this was protected by a silver cover. There was a silver dish, on which there were two pieces of rye bread and this, too, had a silver cover. There was a silver urn in which there was some fancy dressing. There was a silver plate and a silver knife and a silver fork. The platter, too, had a silver cover embracing the whole affair.

All told, dishes, tray, platter, covers, etc., must have weighed fifteen pounds.

"Goodness gracious," said the man with the cold, "I wanted an onion sandwich, not a young restaurant."

"Beg pardon," the waiter replied, "we always serve them this way."

FARMER DOESN'T GET IT.

Then he presented the bill. It was sixty-five cents. The man with the cold paid it and tipped the waiter to the extent of fifteen cents.

He took one slice of bread and one slice of onion and ate them. Then he set the tray and the rest of the onion out in the hall to lure the neighborhood.

This done, he went to bed.

Why should farmers complain of poor prices for grain and vegetables when an urbanite pays sixty cents for an onion sandwich?

But then the urbanite pay this for the sandwich.

He does not. What he pays for is the thing called "service" (which isn't service), plus what is called "overhead."

About the weirdest apology for a sound, serviceable business institution is the American hotel.

No one can appreciate this fully who does not travel a lot. There is nothing so loosely and incompetently managed and so carelessly conducted. There has been a tremendous loss in every branch of the business in the last eight years.

ITCH FOR TIPS EVERYWHERE.

A man who has been in more than thirty so-called first class hotels in the last seventy-five days, and has sought for the best in each city, has found less than ten that are notable in the extent of fifteen cents.

In only half a dozen has he found bathrooms without leaks or other faults. He has found waiters, chambermaids and other attaches careless and incompetent as a general rule.

He has found the office force afflicted with an epidemic of the itch for tips, almost an insistence for tips for anything and everything done for one.

And this in a country in which we boast that all men are free and equal.

PAWTUCKET MAN WILL GIVE HOME AS HOSPITAL

Webster, Nov. 8.—Morris F. Copant of Pawtucket has offered his big Summer cottage on Dudley in the town of Southbridge, Webster and Dudley as a community hospital, and agrees to deed over the property if the first three cities or towns unite in a hospital here. The building contains thirty outside rooms and sixty-five acres of land. A committee from the three towns has been selected to consider the proposition.

WALL ST. GOSSIP

By MONITOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—In spite of the impending holiday today with another coming on Friday the stock market showed a good deal of strength Monday although the volume of trading naturally was curtailed. Advances at the close were quite numerous throughout the list, and they were registered in unexpected quarters. For example, General Motors which has been lethargic for months, broke out of its rule on a very large turnover and made a gain of more than one point. Jones took started off with an overnight gain of two points, and at the close was only a fraction below the high point of the evening.

THE oils made a rather disappointing response to the early announcement of an advance of 50 cents per barrel in the price of Mid Continent Crude. This caused considerable selling in the forenoon. In the last hour, however, there was a marked change in the undertone of this group and under the leadership of Pacific Oil, which made a net advance of 3 3-4 points, the domestic issues all showed increasing firmness. Mexican Petroleum was quite active and sold up to 109 1-2 although profit-taking cut down this gain.

THE strength in General Motors was largely responsible for the buying that came into the other motor shares. Studebaker responded only moderately but Chandler was freely bought. The steels were sluggish. The rails generally moved within narrow limits, practically the only exceptions being Great Northern and Northern Pacific which showed some demand toward the close on rumors of a Burlington dividend which would go largely to reimburse these companies for recent expenditures in behalf of Burlington.

MARKED irregularity in the course of prices during the day was due in part to the holidays tomorrow and Friday with the consequent reluctance of traders to take a position, and in part to the technical position of individual stocks. The strength in specialties which had been manifest throughout the early trading spread to the market as a whole in the last hour and the close was buoyant with shorts bidding eagerly for stocks with which to cover their commitments.

FOR the first time in many months General Motors on very large transactions advanced more than a point and held its gain to the close. One buying order for 15,000 shares of stock started the movement, which spread speedily to the other motors. Chandler, which also registered an opening gain of one point, after selling back to Saturday's close, renewed its advance and sold at a new high price for the present movement, Studebaker, too, was in active demand pressure earlier in the day, also participated in the strength of the closing hour. There was no news to account for the advances, and they were ascribed generally to speculative operations.

CORN PRODUCTS REFINING, on buying attributed to inside interests, advanced to 88, which is a new high price for the present movement. Not long ago it was predicted that this stock would, within a year or at most a year, sell higher than at any time last year. The prediction was made by a very familiar with the company's affairs, and on the strength of it a speculative pool was formed which can be understood to be in part responsible for the present advance. Toward the close there were indications of profit-taking.

JONES TEA was one of the specialties which was strong on the announcement that the specialties in Corn Products with a group of his friends has acquired a substantial interest in the company, indicating favorable developments in the near future. The last published statement of operations was for July and was $250,000 for the month of September, but it is understood that quite a favorable showing was due to the marking down of the last of its inventories to the lowest market price. Operations now are reported as being on a profitable basis for the year and share annually earned on the stock.

BURNS BROTHERS was under pressure for some unexplained reason. From a recent high of 114, the price declined to 107 1-2 which was attributed to profit-taking by traders who had purchased the stock much lower levels and thought they saw better opportunities in other parts of the market.

THE steel stocks were the laggards in the market. Up to date operations been in evidence for the last month and there appears to be little interest in stocks in the belief that the recent advance has more than discounted the improvement in the industry.

SELLING in the domestic oils which carried some of them to new low prices for the reaction, was inspired when the Standard Oil subsidiaries and the Prairie Oil and Gas Co. published an advance of fifty cents per barrel in its prices for Mid-Continent crude oil, making that price $2 per barrel. At the same time North Texas crude was advanced to $2.35 per barrel. Pacific Oil, which had been below 44, rallied more than a point.

CALL money, which opened and re- viewed at 5 per cent, advanced during the day to 6 per cent at which rate it closed. Monday's loans were at 5 per cent. Evidently there was the usual pre-holiday demand for funds, which served to harden the rate. The clearing house bank statement of Saturday indicated that there would be no abundance of money during the week.

THE LAFAYETTE arrived with $6,- 465,000 from France and the Atlantic freight carried $1,000,000 of silver from Germany. A small shipment of $17,000 in gold arrived from Central American ports. Kuhn Loeb & Co. report that $2,500,000 is arriving for them on the Aquitania which sailed Saturday.

THE F. W. Woolworth Company re- ports an increase in sales for October of $1,164,582, and for the ten months period, an increase of $10,-298,221. Officials of the company estimate that November and December sales will be the largest in the history of the company.

GREAT NORTHERN and Northern Pacific were heavily bought just before the close on rumor that the directors of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy would meet and declare a cash dividend of not less than $10 a share on the stock of that company, a large proportion of which is held by the other two roads jointly. It is understood that this will not necessarily indicate an additional disbursement to the stockholders of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, but is rather a repayment to those companies for expenditures which they have made for the Burlington. This payment will, if made, increase the strength of the cash position of the Hill properties.

WRONG TO LIVE UPON BOOM PROMISES

Evans Says Chicago Men Are Anxious Despite Fall in Federal Reserve Rates

By C. B. EVANS

Chicago, Nov. 8.—The money market of this city is following the Federal Reserve rates down the incline and the casual borrower now welcomes his old friend, 6 per cent.

Prime commercial paper goes at half a point lower and this really shows a greater ease in money rates than loans on collateral, for there was a time during the war and the post-war stress when prime commercial paper was not wanted by the banks, generally speaking, inasmuch as they could not tell how soon it concern, apparently strong, would become openly weak.

AN OLD QUESTION.

The change brings up the old question whether decline in the rates for money is a prophecy of business activity or the beginning of a process that will culminate in extremely low rates because there will be no demand and funds will not be wanted.

The latter theory is held by some of the most discerning business men of long experience, who say that the bad conditions in Europe will in the end ropes will invade the United States. Whether these commentors are right or not, it is true that this city as a whole body now living on a too liberal scale or presuming too optimistically on the boom times that some have predicted is pursuing a fatuous policy.

With bad agricultural conditions on the one side and the desolation of Europe on the other, the Chicago resident surely needs to take counsel in conservatism. Remember 1919 and early 1920.

Yet the worst things predicted by men making such forecasts have not happened. A year ago strong an peals were made by Southern men to capitalists in this city to come to their help, for they thought the South was in danger of collapse after the first of January, 1921. While certain of the delegates to the recent investment bankers' convention in New Orleans report that dullness prevails throughout the South, there is no talk of general collapse and that part of the United States appears to be little worse off than the rest of us.

STOCK MARKET AS PROPHET.

Recent prices for stocks have indicated the expectation of a lift in the affairs of the country for some time. Quotations from those figures have been moderate.

The stock market was the only successful prophet regarding the course of affairs from the latter part of 1919 on through 1920 and to about midyear 1921, declaring by an almost constant rise that the end of the business was to be bad. That being the fact, the recent course of stocks may perhaps be taken as a prophecy of better things to happen in 1922.

The prices of active stocks in the New York market are also strong in spite of the opinions of a large number of persons, generally well informed, that a reaction is coming. The recent advance in bonds, while due perhaps in the main to the lower interest rates, means increasing confidence.

But enterprise does not start up. Somebody please build something. If only a railroad siding, so that we may get an idea of the puzzling character of Americans in former years. The spirit of this wish may however be considered to some extent by noting the increase in certain classes of building. In this city the value on building permits for October was $10,457,250 against $2,538,150 for October, 1920. The average cost was smaller than in October, 1920, indicating not large enterprise but the need of homes.

LOOKING TO NEXT YEAR.

There is real backing for the confident talk in regard to the petroleum interest, as to which not much is now in this city, but oil is not all there is to an engine and it remains to be seen how much work the engine will have to do.

Also certain of our industries, mainly those related to building, are objects of strong expectation by many of their friends. It is natural in both of these lines there is hesitation in view of the possibilities of the situation of next year. What is presumed that unless there is some marked change the banks that have been quite free of money will stop it and many of them and tell men to walk who cannot walk.

Just at this time we have one real consolation. Another king has passed to his St. Helena, which this time is called Madeiras. The principal utility of a king in these days is found in the picture and film and playing cards.

BANKS TO BE CLOSED ON ARMISTICE DAY

The banks of Boston will be closed on Armistice Friday, Nov. 11, Fred C. Ruggles, manager of the Boston clearing house, issued a formal announcement to that effect. Makers of notes, drafts and other paper falling due on November 11 will be protected by the clearing house to pay on Nov. 10, and the banks are instructed to notify their customers to that effect.

MONEY LOANED BRITAIN USED AGAINST U.S.

Official Records Show This Nation's Generosity Reacted Against Own Interests

By Universal Service.

Washington, Nov. 8.—Data report now before the Senate judiciary committee on the American government's war loans to the allied nations presents these "outstanding facts concerning the loans to Great Britain," as discovered by the committee's counsel, Don M. Hunt, in his examination of official records.

"The correspondence shows that large sums of this money were loaned to England for the express purpose of allowing her to return to normality.

AGAINST U. S. INTERESTS.

"The correspondence shows that in at least one instance the officials of the Treasury Department recommended loans to England, so that she could compete with the United States in foreign trade, and so that England could build up her merchant marine to pre-war level, so that the money of the United States was used against the United States in developing England's merchant marine and export trade.

"The correspondence shows that while we were loaning these enormous sums to Great Britain, she was using large sums of money to obtain world-wide monopoly in oil and oil fields. The report of Mr. Skinner, the American commercial attache, shows that some of this British money gained control of the Mexican oil fields, in which company has large holdings in the United States, Mexico and South America.

"None of the money paid by the United States to Great Britain for the transportation of troops was credited to the account of Great Britain as a partial payment on her loan or interest. All of it was paid directly to the British government.

RELOANED TO OTHERS.

"Large sums of money were loaned to Great Britain and by her reloaned to France, Italy and Belgium, and in this manner constituted the excess provision that the produce and merchandize purchased with these loans was to be purchased from Great Britain.

"The significance of the foregoing disclosures is emphasized as the report sheds light on the authorized loans to foreign governments when engaged in war with enemies of the United States for the purpose of the prosecution of the war.

"Great Britain owes to the United States $4,166,319,358.44 principal and $467,592,283.56 accrued interest, a total of $4,633,624,642.32. According to the report, approximately $3,950,000,000 of this loaned to Great Britain before the Armistice and approximately $250,000,000 since that date.

"The report says the government holds no obligations of Great Britain for any considerable sum of food supplies sold to her after the Armistice.

U. S. TO ABANDON PART OF NAVAL PROGRAM

40,000 Tons of Authorized Ships Will Not Be Built, According to Present Plans

Washington, Nov. 8.—The first definite and concrete proposition in the American program for limitation of armaments involves abandonment of about 40,000 tons of ships "authorized but not yet commenced."

This information was obtained from authoritative sources. The construction proposed to be abandoned represents such advanced ideas in shipbuilding that the proportional concessions from the other nations out of necessity involve important sacrifices, it was stated.

Other convention developments were:

First—The expressed hope of officials that Japan will not insist that we raise the issue of racial equality at the forthcoming conference.

Second—A preliminary agreement whereby the former German cable from Guam to Yap may be utilized by all nations during the period of the conference.

Third—A State Department communication to China suggesting that the proposed repayment of $5,000,000 borrowed in the interior as not to jeopardize prestige at the conference.

The construction the United States proposes to abandon is that of seven 2,000-ton submarines, twelve 1,200-ton destroyers, and one 10-ton transport.

The submarine type referred to is that upon which the Naval Construction Bureau has concentrated the ingenuity and ability for the past five years. It was designed to be the last word in submarine building for many years. The destroyers were to be the last vessels built in the 1916 program, and were considered a highly important item.

If the Japanese raise the bugaboo of racial equality to gain concessions at the arms conference, as they did at Versailles, an outside issue of serious possibilities will be added to the long list of knotty problems that will have to be solved if the leaders of the nations can agree on the primary question of limitation of armament.

While the question will be purposely omitted from the agenda of the conference, yet the fear exists that events really in control may force it to come to the front. In fact, high officials admit that the assurance Japan's delegation has not yet received any assurance from Japan that this question will not be raised.

It is a matter of general knowledge that at the Versailles conference the Japanese delegation privately injected the question of political and racial equality for all peoples.

The compromise which resulted is now a matter of history. By finally yielding on the racial question the Japanese received the award of the rich Chinese province of Shantung for themselves, it was said.

U. S. MUST BUY ABROAD, SAYS DEFREES

Head of National Bodies Tells Chamber Needs of Tariff Revision

One of the greatest problems that form obstacles in the way of complete business readjustment today is the enactment of a permanent tariff bill, according to Joseph H. Defrees, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, who spoke on tariff sentiment at the twelfth inaugural meeting and annual dinner of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, held at the Copley-Plaza.

Other obstacles faced by business today, as pointed out by Mr. Defrees, include the unsettled railroad situation, the need for tax revision and present foreign exchange conditions. But the greatest of all, he pointed out, is the need for a new tariff bill.

MUST BUY AS WELL AS SELL.

"The tariff," said Mr. Defrees, "is not an easy question to dispose of, but it is easy to see that business cannot safely progress and engagements be intelligently made in the absence of reasonable certainty in this important field."

Mr. Defrees stated that from present indications the Emergency Tariff passed early in the year will be extended until next February.

"That a permanent bill should be passed at the earliest possible date or its consideration postponed to a definite date in the future, seems clear," he said.

One of the important features of the new tariff to be taken into consideration, Mr. Defrees pointed out, is the matter of foreign trade.

"Adequate foreign trade cannot be expected unless we buy abroad as well as sell abroad," he declared. "Trade is barter. Our customers if they are to remain our customers not unnaturally expect to sell to us. Any tariff now enacted should take into account our new situation as a creditor nation, and in now having many customers abroad it should at once be fair to those customers and their necessities as well as to the requirements of our own industries."

URGES PRIVATE OWNERSHIP.

Mr. Defrees emphasized the importance of keeping up our foreign trade, pointing out that production would have to be decreased unless this was done. He declared that foreign trade is necessary as in his opinion this country cannot be entirely self-contained.

A stirring plea in behalf of private ownership of railroads was made by Edgar R. Clark, former chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He asked business men to look with the railroads for a time, to co-operate and assist in order that the roads may get a chance to get back on their feet and not be driven through the bankruptcy courts to government ownership.

Tracing the present railroad difficulties from a period before the war up to the present time, Mr. Clark attempted to show how the railroads have fared, and how the rate making that are the most unusual and which they have not control.

He appealed to business and financial men to lend a hand in rescuing the railroads from the danger of government ownership.

FEARS POLITICS.

"Does the business world desire to have the furnishing of transportation facilities and the fixing of charges for use of same to pass to the control of a director general, with the possibility that important questions relating thereto may be decided with a view to the political effect of the decision?" asked Mr. Clark.

He pointed out that no matter how transportation is provided the cost will eventually come out of the public, either in charges of in taxes as the case may be. He then pleaded that business not allow the transportation agency to become "the football of politics."

GRAND OPERA DRAWS BIG AUDIENCE

"Carmen" Given an Excellent Performance by San Carlo Opera Company

By FRED J. McISAAC

Times may be bad and business stagnant, but you wouldn't have guessed it at the Boston Opera House last night where a capacity audience witnessed a performance of "Carmen" by the San Carlo Opera Company.

The familiar opera seems to strike a responsive chord in the breasts of Bostonians. The old Boston Opera Company was floated and started as a three-dollar opera institution and it was not until it became ambitious and raised prices that its decline and fall began. Three-dollar opera drew an audience which wore evening clothes and jewels and promenaded, and behaved as opera house audiences used to do in the days before the war.

But three dollars won't buy as much as they did in 1910, when Henry Russell lauched the original Boston Opera Company, and the San Carlo organization makes no pretensions to rival the old Boston Opera or even the present Ravinia and Chicago organizations, either in the size of the orchestra and chorus or the regularity and vocal accomplishments of his singers.

COMPANY A SUCCESS.

Fortuna Gallo has been operating this company long enough for a dozen years with conspicuous success. Three or four seasons ago he played the Boston Opera House for a short season but his company has grown and expanded so that it could hardly be mistaken for the same organization.

Grand opera is a tremendously expensive form of entertainment and the chief concern of any impresario of forty carried by the San Carlo must run into a staggering total. Even leaving out of consideration the principal singers is considered. In fairness to them, all these things must be presented, for the tendency is to measure his cloth by the coat of the Metropolitan Opera Company and complain if it falls short. Of course if falls short. But it is not necessary to use an orchestra of one hundred or a chorus of one hundred twenty-five to give an enjoyable performance of opera. If the singers look well and sing well and act well, and the settings are only tatterdemalion but is competent and the chorus is well trained, and the ballet is capable, if only a portion worth while, Mary Garden, Geraldine Farrar, with the Metropolitan, are no more fitted vocally and dramatically than the whole. If anything she has a better voice than these two famous ladies. But the orchestra is competent and the chorus is well trained, and the ballet is capable, if only a portion worth while, Mary Garden, Geraldine Farrar, with the Metropolitan, are no more fitted vocally and dramatically than the whole. If anything she has a better voice than these two famous ladies. But in the verve, the esprit, the fire and the dash which should characterize the ensemble, Mary Garden was sadly lacking and her idea of vamping Don José was to bump him hip.

HAS AGREEABLE VOICE.

In Romeo Boscacci, Mr. Gallo has an Italian tenor of the old-fashioned type, utterly without histrionic ability but owning an unusually agreeable lyric tenor voice. As a Romeo he won't do, despite his front name, but as a singer he was very worth while. Madeleine Kellis, the Michaela, is a Boston girl, it appears, with a beautiful light soprano. She was unsteady and got off key occasionally last night because of her nervousness, but she seems like a find. The Escamillo was a French baritone named Henri, quite a wooden person, whose baritone voice was mostly smothered in his throat, but he occasionally got out a ringing note. The small parts were all well taken.

Sylvia Tell, the ballerina, danced charmingly and led a small but skilled ballet.

The Salvation Army surely deserves well of the people and loyal Americans and I wish you all success."

If was the ninth consecutive meeting of chairmen held thus far. There were about seventy-five present and their reported contributions of $150,000, making a total of about $65,000.

Congress Listening to the Mere Taxpayer

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

Wise observers of Washington life say that a new influence is making itself felt at the nation's capital.

Whenever a new Congress tackles the tariff, or the revenue, the hotels at Washington fill up and the anterooms of the Capitol are thronged by men who hope to profit. The wool lobby and the hide lobby, the patriotic gentlemen who seek to apply the lesson of the dyes taught us in the war for their own surpassing profit, potters, spinners and weavers—all are there.

One striking phenomenon of the Washington of today is the rapid increase in the number of law firms. There is not much court business at the national capital. The Supreme Court is there, but most of the cases before it are argued by counsel from other cities. Washington, having no manufacturing, little financial activity, and small commercial interests, does not originate much litigation.

But lawyers thrive and multiply there. Mostly they are former members of Congress, often "lame ducks" who hated to respond to the invitation of their constituents to come home.

Their business is with the departments, or with the Congress they once adorned. To secure this or that concession, to avert this or that obligation, to extract something from the government for the profit of their clients is their occupation.

But today everyone feels an influence not exerted during the generation past in Washington, but now so strong that it cannot be ignored.

This is the TAXPAYER.

In the decade before the war Federal taxes were so light that there was no inclination to attack governmental expenditures. During the war there was an orgy of expenditure in which no one stopped to count the cost.

The nation is now determined that the job is done and that waste shall stop.

While there are no lobbyists nor any law firms employed to represent the taxpayer, in Washington the taxpayer's complaint has been thoroughly imprinted upon the Congressional consciousness.

And it is high time. Business is taxed to death. The commercial and industrial world is suffering a depression almost unexampled in our commercial history. Our salvation must be worked out by ourselves. Only the rigid elimination of waste, the active encouragement of production, and the restoration of credit, can bring back business activity.

If Congress is responsive to the demands of the taxpayer, and there are hopeful signs that it will be, the fruit of this session's activities will be a speedy revival of business.

Endicott Memorial Deserved

Chairman of Public Safety Executive Committee During War Served Courageously and Intelligently

The memorial at the State House to commemorate the services of the late Henry B. Endicott, who was chairman of the executive committee of our State Committee of Public Safety during the war, his public service well merits.

Mr. Endicott deserves a memorial. He served the State during the war with all his heart and mind, courageously, intelligently and ceaselessly. Mr. Endicott was one of the State's ablest citizens. He was also one of our moderate citizens, who had the intelligence to know that we must do justice to labor, if we would make labor efficient.

His decisions on wages were really a great contribution to the winning of the war, for they composed dangerous threats to the efficiency of our labor, and, therefore, to the productivity of the country.

Dismemberment of Russia

Professor Miliukov Is to Be Commended for Denouncing This Desire of "Allies" for Weakening the Country

Professor Miliukov in his interesting lectures at the Lowell Institute referred with disapproval to the desire "of some of our allies" to weaken Russia by dismembering her.

Among other things, Professor Miliukov denounces this attempt to dismember Russia with becoming indignation. Indeed, the attitude of all the Russian reactionaries on this question is the only thing we have admired in their whole conduct.

Their unwillingness to have Russia dismembered elevates them somewhat above the typical reactionary we have found in history, who appeals to the reactionary governments outside against a successful majority within their own country. The traitor has usually been willing to destroy his country in order to empower his own faction. The Russian reactionaries have been willing to destroy the freedom of the Russian people, and their economic and social program, but they have not been willing, apparently, to emasculate Russian territory. To that extent, their patriotism must be praised.

We wish, however, that Professor Miliukov would tell us that he, among others, joined in warning the French people that if they took the Czar's bonds they would take them subject to the danger that the Russian Liberals would repudiate them if they ever came into power. Russia ought to pay these bonds for practical rather than moral reason. But the Bolshevist government ought not to be blamed for hesitating to pay them.

Pigeons Need No Landing

Fliers Will Soon Need None

Copyright, 1921, Star Company.

Some time ago it was suggested that if flying machines are to go from America to Germany on their own power it should be possible to build and locate in mid-ocean a floating platform on which the machines might alight, to take on fuel and from which they might start.

A Wisconsin manufacturer is said to have laid before the Aircraft Board an engineering scheme for a mid-ocean landing and starting place for flying machines.

A number of these landing places or hulls would be stationed on the Atlantic, fifty miles apart. They would have sufficient power to keep them in their own particular place on the ocean, where the fliers would look for them. They would be protected with long-range guns and steel nets from submarines, in case of war.

The matter at one time was seriously considered by the government. If successful the Wisconsin man's scheme would make it possible for flying machines to go over to Europe in a steady stream, taking passengers with them, and making the trip in twenty-four hours.

The world, however, moves very rapidly. Flying machines will cross the ocean before long without the need of any landing place, as easily as a pigeon flies across a valley.

King Solomon's Quarries

HOW often great discoveries spring from trifling incidents! The trite reflection comes to mind naturally on hearing how the quarries of King Solomon were found. Dr. Allen Moore, for seventeen years a resident of Palestine, tells the curious tale.

For many, many years, he says, travelers and archaeologists were puzzled to know where the enormous blocks of stone still standing in the ruins of Solomon's temple at Jerusalem were quarried.

One day a little dog chased a lizard down a hole among the debris. The next instant the dog also disappeared. His master, coming to the opening, peered down in vain. He called, and to his amazement his voice came back as from great depths.

He summoned assistance, and a passage was opened into immense subterranean quarries. There were found huge masses of stone almost ready to be hoisted above ground. "And don't you remember," asks Dr. Moore, "that we are told in our Bibles that the temple was built without sound of saw or of hammer? The fact that the quarrymen worked under ground partly explains that."

Japanese Tongue

Sir Dennison Ross, director of the London School of Oriental Studies, says Japanese is one of the easiest languages of the world to pronounce. "Most of the words end in vowels and none of the consonants offer any difficulties." The structure of Japanese is very peculiar and very strange to the beginner. It is hard to realise a grammar which recognizes no persons and genders—but such is the case with the Japanese. The language also has no relative pronouns. However, there is no reason why people whose mother tongue is English should fight shy of the language says Sir Dennison Ross. For practical, everyday purposes, six months' study of the spoken tongue will carry an intelligent man a long way if he has competent teachers.

Men Who Halt Changes

By Garrett P. Serviss

THE world has never stood still, although it would always have been to the interest of every flourishing species of its inhabitants to make it stand still, or at least to allow it to advance only in the direction most pleasing and beneficial to them.

The great beasts of the age of the giant reptiles would now be ruling the planet if they could have stayed the march of evolutionary change. The earth would have remained a globe of molluscs if the oysters and clams, the snails and squids of ancient days had possessed the power to prevent the rise of higher orders of animals pushing them from supremacy in their paradises.

The average thought of every man and every race is: "Things are good as they are—let them alone." But this, of course, does not apply to any change for the better affecting the particular person or particular race concerned. It is the pure essence of selfishness, and selfishness, is compact of fears and starts at every unwonted sound and movement.

Great Conservation Scheme

These reflections are suggested by the growing movement in scientific circles for the conservation of wild forms of life that existing conditions tend to drive into extinction.

I have before me a paper by Dr. F. B. Sumner, of La Jolla, Cal., on "the responsibility of the biologist in the matter of preserving natural conditions." Dr. Sumner remarks that it is obvious "that both our native fauna" (animals) "and flora" (plants) "and our natural scenery are disappearing at an appalling rate."

Appalling will seem a strong word to most readers, but there is no doubt that it expresses the impression of many naturalists when they perceive how fast many of the organisms that they want to observe and study at first hand are vanishing. They want to keep them alive because they are not satisfied with second-hand acquaintance with them.

They are not content with the observations and experiments of their predecessors, but they want to see the experiment for themselves. They would have everything present and nothing past—no room or subject for history. If this could be broadly successful evolution would be arrested. The conservationists call for the setting aside in some cases of great tracts, to be made into huge asylums and "cities of refuge" for various kinds of animals and plants that modern conditions and the march of change are hunting out of existence. But such places would, after all, be only menageries and botanic gardens stuntined, grown beyond all reasonable size and confessedly using space that may be needed for more pressing purposes of humanity.

Something They Can't Finish

For, Dr. Sumner, in calling for national organizations to forward the conservation movement, dwells with disapproval upon the "resistless pressure of increasing population everywhere"—meaning human population—and remarks: "For all we know this unbridled growth of population may be halted before the world is utterly congested, and while there are still large areas in a more or less primitive condition."

To maintain these areas in "primitive condition" is the object of the movement. If its promoters would be content with modest results probably the plan could be carried into effect on a small scale here and there, but when they talk of a great administrative enterprise, with State and national government control and heavy expenses for maintenance, the confessed object of which is, through "the preservation of large fractions of our fauna and flora and landscape in their natural condition," to hold back change—when we hear that, the fact with which we began looms up again, viz.: that the world never stood still, and cannot, because the march of evolution is the heartbeat of planetary life.

Our national parks are good things, and they ought to be maintained, but we are pretty well provided with them now.

Nobody loves nature more than I do; nobody more detests the unnecessary destruction of life or the defacement of natural beauties and wonders; but there should be measures in all things and "the will of God" must, in the end, be done.

Letter to the Editor

Hanging of Soldiers

Editor Boston American:

Reading of Senator Watson's recent charges in your paper of the hanging of soldiers without trials, I would like to say that to me or anyone who spent any time overseas these charges are absurd. It is true that men were hanged, for the same reason that men are hanged here in the United States today. And all of them were given a fair trial by a general court-martial, which court I think, gives more opportunity of justice being meted out equally than our civil courts. One thing is certain, money plays no part in that kind of a trial.

But to return to the main point—Senator Watson has a photograph of a scaffold on which it is alleged that American doughboys were executed. All well and good, but does this photo tell the time, place and date it was taken?

If Senator Watson can investigate the origin of this photo, he has, perhaps, a case worth airing. Many things, of course, happened in different places in France, but speaking of my own division, which was first over and last back, I can say that no such things as these ever happened in our area.

EX-DOUGHBOY SERGEANT.

Smiles

THE OPTIMIST.

Frank: "What's that?" "Why, as soon as you commence to do so the sky clears up, the sun comes out, and it becomes pretty plain there never will be a rainy day."

The famous star is just nineteen,
A youngish lady, she;
I'm satisfied this is the truth—
Her grandaughter told me.

Macaulay's Reading Habit

Macaulay like Shelley was in the habit of reading as he walked the London streets. According to his biographer, "he could neither swim, nor row, nor drive, nor skate, nor shoot." His seldom crossed a saddle, and never willingly. The only exercise in which he can be said to have excelled was that of threading crowded streets with his eyes fixed upon a book.

HE WORRIES OVER WORLD NEGLECTS FAMILY

HE'S worried about the world—awfully worried.

Sometimes it seems as if he really couldn't stand it.

There's Russia—what on earth are you going to do about Russia? People are starving—no, they're getting rich, come to think of it, but it's the wrong people, they say.

France—dear me, they're all going crazy in France—paying a hundred dollars for a dinner and doing other foolish things.

Agitators Everywhere

England—why you can't throw a stone in England without hitting an agitator.

Ireland—that's past even mentioning.

Italy—whatever are they coming to in Italy?

India—seething like a kettle of hot soup when it used to boil over under the butternut tree in grandmother's day.

Africa—if you knew the truth about Africa you'd never sleep a wink from this day forth forever more.

America—

Oh, well, what's the use?

The capitalists and labor—"rich man, poor man"—how is it the old rhyme used to go?—"beggar man, thief"—only they all seem to be beggar men nowadays or thieves—as far as my friend, the Man Who Worries, is concerned. The world is divided into two classes to him—beggars and thieves.

If you aren't a beggar, you must be a thief—that's all there is to it.

And that's what worries him so—and he talks about it, and argues about it, and writes about it and makes speaches about it, and hasn't time to go to work and earn a living—he's so busy thinking of it.

And his wife earns the living—such as it is. And his children don't look very well nourished—one of them died the other day. They say the little fellow would have lived if he'd had the right kind of food and the right kind of care. His father felt awfully about it. He denounced everybody in the world for the death of his little son—everybody but himself.

He hasn't time—he's so busy fretting about what other people ought to do.

Yet he's a good fellow, too. Kindly and well meaning and very sympathetic, but somehow he always reminds me of an eager child, looking at the world through the wrong end of an opera glass—what should look big, looks little. Once in a while he reverses the glass and fixes it so that what should look little looks big.

A Sure Remedy

He never uses his plain, everyday eyes at all—not without the glasses of elated optimism or of melancholy pessimism.

Poor fellow, how much better off he'd be if he'd just make up his mind to do his own work and put away his own wages and take care of his own family for just one little year!

No longer—just twelve months or three hundred and sixty-five days—and only a day at a time.

I believe by the end of the year he'd forget all about being worried, and only remember to laugh and cry, and sing and sign with the rest of the family in a sort of human, simple, honest and true fashion.

And somehow, do you know, I believe the world would get along just exactly as well as it does now—when he's so worried about it.

I wonder if it wouldn't.

A PLACE FOR EVERYTHING

"No matter how disordered it makes a house look, a man will lay down anything anywhere about a house, and expect to go back and find the house in order and his things just where he left them."

Complaining about the inconsistency of men as well as their disorderly tendencies, a housewife, like many another, speaks thus.

Yet it is true.

Every woman wants her home to look neat, and in order to accomplish this effect must keep things picked up as fast as they are put down, out of place.

If she did not keep picking up the husband would lose no time in complaining about the disorder.

And so little differences arise from the simple cause—a wife wanting to be orderly, forgetting what she has done with friend husband's belongings and neither one having an idea where to look.

But you say, "You think there should be a definite, understood place to put everything in the house."

That would solve the problem if both were equally as anxious to keep order.

SPARE ROD AND SAVE CHILD'S RESPECT

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

THAT word, Democracy, with the ideas involved, brings a host of new meanings into human relationships.

Everything is made new with its coming. Even parents and children are no longer the old parents and children. But there is a distinctly democratic parental and filial relationship.

With all reverence, let it be said, the biblical doctrine of sparing the rod and spoiling the child sounds as patriarchal, oriental and antiquated—as it is!

Herein, too, we have experienced an evolution, and a desirable one.

Along with monarchic organization of society went a similar organization of the family. Perhaps the reverse would state the situation more truly. As the father was the indisputable head of his family, so the king became the unquestioned ruler of the larger group.

The will of the king was the supreme law of his land—no more unquestionable than the wish and word of the father in each home.

Which was all very well while average self-respect was at such low ebb as to allow the exaggerating reverence of royalty. Likewise, while each home was fairly sufficient to itself, homage to its paternal head was natural and necessary for its unity.

Could Do No Wrong

If the king could do no wrong, the father's authority was also incontrovertible. The king pronounced penalties according to whim and judgment, and the father, like his prototype, had power of life and death over his household.

Out of such social conditions, persisting for ages, there might well develop a moral code, governing the mutual attitude of parents and children, which put all the power and privilege on one side and all obligations and duties on the other.

The Fifth Commandment registers that ideal, with its demand that thou shalt honor thy father and thy mother. St. Paul was already in the line of democratic tendency, when he warned parents not to provoke their children to wrath!

Just for a moment let us pause, in our democratic plea for the Child, to admit with all students of social history that the development of the Home, with its by-product of love and beauty and many other of the tender graces of our human nature, is one of the supreme achievements of mankind.

Nevertheless, while the Home is the first social unit, the ultimate human unit is the individual. He is the chief concern of a democracy, and even the final justification of all social grouping.

What that means is simply this: In every conflict between the Individual and any social institution whatsoever, the interest and sympathy of democracy would be with the individual!

A truly democratic state recognises the Child as its chief care. Therefore it says, in spirit, if not in so many words—to every parent: Thou shalt respect thy child, even though wouldst have thy child respect thee!

Air Is Charged

Indeed, our democratic atmosphere is so charged with self-assertion that the lightning of rebellion is likely to be let loose whenever the parents undertake to use unrighteously their traditional authority over children.

"Spare the rod and spoil the child?" Indeed, you would better spare the rod if you want to save the child's respect for you, and if you are eager to maintain that modicum of parental authority which is desirable and necessary, even in the Democratic Home!

No reader of these words needs feel or fear that we advocate a revolutionary household, in which there is no headship, no guidance and no leadership. By no means! The plea is for a home of essential equals, in which the greater wisdom and the deeper devotion of the parents carry their intrinsic authority.

If you are a parent, please realize that you owe loyalty to the sacred principle of democracy as well as to the holy duties of parenthood.

It is your peculiar function to interpret your parental place and power and responsibility in democratic terms. You dare exercise no autocratic authority, because such action spells treason to democracy and is sure to stir resentment in your child.

You should not risk losing the child's respect, in order to assert your own undemocratic "dignity."

The process will be still slower, whereby democratic children will learn to blend a proper self-respect with glad obedience to their parents.

All of which is only a hint of the dynamite and the difficulty locked up in our democratic enterprise.
